Odds & Eva

The Jan/Feb issue had you guys loving and loathing.

Eva Forever

Eva Longoria is once, twice, three times a Maxim cover girl [Jan/Feb]. I applaud you and give you a standing ovation! —Joseph Suazo, via e-mail You're welcome, and thanks for reading. Side note: If "standing ovation" is code for something, please never write to us again!

Mystic Bullshit

In Jan/Feb you guys had a psychic named Laura predict who was going to be in the Super Bowl [Circus Maximus]. She said anybody from the South, something about horses, and the Patriots. If she's going to be honest, why doesn't she just say she has no fucking idea? She already picked half of the damn NFL.

-Derik Diemer, via e-mail

Hold on a minute, Derik, are you implying that a psychic is maybe full of shit? Crazy! Incidentally, "shit" is as accurate a prediction as could have been made about this year's Super Bowl.

Our Bad

In regard to your Q&A with Army Staff Sgt. Ty Carter ["Maxim's Hometown Heroes"], he is a Medal of Honor recipient, not "winner." Our nation's highest award is not a popularity contest.

—Spc. Casey Ashfield, via e-mail Poor choice of words, great choice of hero. For those who missed it, we profiled Staff Sgt. Carter, who received the Medal of Honor for his heroism in Afghanistan. Once again, we salute you!

Fightin' Words

Regarding the Maximum Warrior 4 contest ["Running and Gunning," November], I'm glad they're on our side. However, if the need arises to rescue a dozen overweight fishermen from 200 miles offshore, extract a hiker with a broken back, followed by a five-hour night search in the middle of the black ocean for an object the size of a volleyball, you'd better contact a U.S. Coast Guard Helicopter Rescue Swimmer. That is, if the 350 of us are not prosecuting other search-and-rescue operations. Keep up the good work.

It's "hone in," homies. —Kirk J. from Cleveland, via e-mail Kirk, you totally missed the point. We did want you to go to your friends' house. They'd planned a "grammar douche" intervention. (BTW, "home in" is correct. Check Webster's.)

Tell us about this scar. I was in an accident in 1996. We were being idiots, and I was sitting in a lawn chair on a flatbed. We were going 80 mph, spinning out, and I was holding on. We were running out of beer, so we were driving back into town, and I let go for one second and flew out.

Truly Unique

Time travel at the speed of a 1935 Speedster?

The 1930s brought unprecedented innovation in machine-age technology and materials. Industrial designers from the auto industry translated the principles of aerodynamics and streamlining into everyday objects like radios and toasters. It was also a decade when an unequaled variety of watch cases and movements came into being. In lieu of hands to tell time, one such complication, called a jumping mechanism, utilized numerals on a disc viewed through a window. With its striking resemblance to the dashboard gauges and radio dials of the decade, the jump hour watch was indeed "in tune" with the times!

How do you want to go? I wanna die having sex. Return to the same place I came from.

What kind of Scary Movie-style death would you definitely not want? Anything that involves decapitation. That looks painful. Can't be resurrected without a head!

Do you have any deathbed confessions?

I ain't confessing nothing on my deathbed. I held dirt all these years. Why start telling truth then? Will you be going to heaven or hell, and why? I'll probably go to hell, which is cool because all my friends will be there. Hell is gonna be a party! Who wants to be up in heaven with all the virgins and prudes? Not me. Where's the strippers?!

LLUSTRATION

Beyoncé

The stunning singer is good at hiding secrets. Thankfully, her glorious legs aren't one of them.

A few months ago Beyoncé, our most favorite child of destiny, made and released an entire visual album without telling us beforehand. We're not going to take it as a slight, since the supersexy songstress is known for her secretive nature. Remember when she tried to hide her relationship with her nowhusband, Jay Z? Or her early pregnancy with Blue Ivy? Or that time she whispered, "I love you. Let's spend our lives together and make a million Beyoncé-Maxim babies"? OK, that one was never revealed to the public...until now. Perhaps that's why we didn't work out: She could never truly love a blabbermouth. :(

Meanwhile, Jay was absolutely ruining a batch of oatmeal cookies.

Can you train insects? -Ben Strepo

Forget about starting a flea circus: Turns out another insect is the bee's knees when it comes to performing. Ohio State entomologist Daniel Herms gives us the buzz: "Honeybees have excellent cognitive skills and can indeed be trained." In fact, they've been taught to locate explosives. Yawn. Call us when they learn to parallel-park.

What is the most money anybody has won playing the slots?

-Liam Nelson

In 2003 a 25-year-old software engineer beat odds of 16.7 million to one and cashed in for $39,710,826.36—the largest jackpot ever—playing a slot machine at the Excalibur Hotel Casino in Las Vegas. The man decided to keep his identity a secret, but we suspect he can be recognized by the humongous change purse he carries around.

Why don't cats hump humans like dogs do? —Josh Klein

Some cats are happy humpers, too. Unneutered males may use blankets as standins for girl cats, according to ASPCA animal behaviorist Kat Miller. But unlike dogswho'll hump most anything for a variety of reasons-"Cats primarily hump other cats and only when mating." Which explains why Mr. Whiskers rebuffed our leg's advances the other night.

If You Bought Computers, Printers, Video Game Consoles, > or Other Devices with Memory

There are class action Settlements involving DRAM, a memory part that is sold by itself or as part of electronic devices such as computers, printers, and video game consoles.

The lawsuits claim that the Defendants fixed the price of DRAM causing individuals and businesses to pay more for DRAM and DRAM-containing devices. The Defendants deny that they did anything wrong.

Who is included in the Settlements?

Individuals and businesses that:

- Purchased DRAM or a device containing DRAM anywhere in the U.S. between 1998 and 2002,
- For their own use or for resale.

Purchases made directly from a DRAM manufacturer are not included (see the list of manufacturers at www.DRAMclaims.com or by calling 1-800-589-1425).

What do the Settlements provide?

The combined Settlements total $310 million. The amount of money you will receive depends on the type and quantity of electronic devices you purchased and the total number of claims made.

Get Money from $310 million Settlement

Simple Online Claim Form Takes 3-5 Minutes

Eligible individuals and businesses are expected to get a minimum $10 payment and perhaps much more. Large purchasers could recover many thousands of dollars.

How can I get a payment?

Claim online or by mail by August 1, 2014. The simple online Claim Form only takes 3-5 minutes for most individuals.

What are my rights?

Even if you do nothing you will be bound by the Court's decisions. If you want to keep your right to sue the Defendants yourself, you must exclude yourself from the Settlement Class by May 5, 2014. If you stay in the Settlement Class, you may object to the Settlements by May 5, 2014.

The Court will hold a hearing on June 25, 2014 at 9:00 a.m. to consider whether to approve the Settlements and a request for attorneys' fees up to 25% of the Settlement Fund, plus reimbursement of costs and expenses. You or your own lawyer may appear and speak at the hearing at your own expense.

Toss Your Cookies in Zero Gravity

Thanks to the Axe Apollo Space Academy, Maxim's PATRICK CARONE boldly puked where no man has puked before.

Attack a Mac'n' Cheese Monster

To celebrate Grilled Cheese Month, Chef MICHAEL FERRARO at Delicatessen N.Y.C. adds some mac to your favorite melty sandwich.

INGREDIENTS

- •1/4 cup flour
- 1/4 cup butter
- •4 cups whole milk
- 1/2 cup grated Vermont yellow cheddar cheese
- 1/2 cup mascarpone cheese
- 3/4 cup + 1/8 cup grated Swiss cheese

- •1/4tsp.grated nutmeg
- Salt and pepper
- 11/2 cups rye bread croutons (1/4-inch cubes)
- 1/2 Tbs. toasted and ground
- caraway seeds • 3 Tbs. Russian
- dressing
- 3/4 lb. elbow macaroni,

- cooked in salt water
- 21/2 cups
 - diced braised corn beef (1/4inch cubes)
 - 1 cup pickled sauerkraut, roughly chopped
 - 1/2 cup diced cheese curds
 - 16 slices beer bread

METHOD

1. Preheat oven to 300°F. 2. Whisk flour and butter together in a saucepan for five minutes over medium heat. 3. Pour in milk and bring to a simmer while whisking. Cook for 10 minutes over low heat.

4. Whisk in cheddar, mascarpone, and 3/4 cup Swiss cheese. Season with nutmeg, salt, and pepper. 5. Toss croutons with caraway seeds and Russian dressing. Toast in oven for four minutes. 6. Mix pasta, cheese sauce, corned beef, sauerkraut, curds, and croutons together in a large bowl. Cool and reserve. 7. Butter beer bread and layer with the mix and remaining Swiss cheese. 8. Sauté in butter over low heat for 3-4 minutes perside. 9. Toast in oven for six minutes, enjoy, then have a heart attack.

Hardwood matador RICKY RUBIO shares his tips for passing and picking players' pockets.

Handle Small Balls

"Training after my ACL injury was tough, but I still improved my ballhandling skills. I'd sit in a chair and dribble with both hands, bounce two balls at once, and spend all day on passing and shooting drills. Now that I'm healthy, I like to dribble a tennis ball, trying my basketball moves with a ball that's much smaller and harder to handle."

Make a Smoke Grenade

Useful for getting off of a desert island, or getting your hot neighbor's attention.

Materials

- Potassium nitrate
- Sugar
- Empty film container
- Pen
- Box of matches
- Straw
- Tissue
- Tape
- Paper clip
- Rubber band
- Empty toilet paper roll
- Fire extinguisher

Mix three parts potassium nitrate (order it online or buy it as stump remover at a hardware store) to two parts sugar in a skillet, preferably on an outdoor stovetop.

- Over low heat, stir till sugar is caramelized and the mix is liquefied. Do not let it burn—it could ignite!
- Pour mixture into 3 film container and stick a pen in it to make space for the fuse. Place in an ice bath to cool for up to an hour.
- Is it true that smoking will stunt my growth?

Fill a straw with match heads, securing them inside with tissue at both ends.

Cut off the strikers on the matchbox. Bend a paper clip into a ring and tape strikers to it, facing each other.

Put the strikers and the paper clip around the matchsticks and secure with a rubber band.

Stick the match 8 fuse in the film container. Then place the grenade in the toilet paper roll with the fuse sticking out.

Tape the container 9 up around the fuse to protect your hands from the heat, keeping a small hole around the fuse at the top.

Get Creative

"I grew up following Magic Johnson and Pistol Pete Maravich. They were all about creating new moves and having fun with the ball. When I'm on the court, I view myself as an artist with a blank canvas; the inspiration comes when I have the ball. I always have a good time and try to get the ball where nobody expects it to go."

Take Pride in Thievery

"I watch a lot of video. I look at a team's D and find the holes so I know how to face them offensively. I also study other point guards so I can anticipate their moves and steal the

Get SEAL Strong

Author of 8 Weeks to SEALFit MARK DIVINE on mastering four domains that separate the boys from the badasses.

STRENGTH This is about developing a foundational functional

Stamina is crucial to SEAL training because you work out in the morning, but then you go into the field and work all day long. Training: Take the primary strength lift that you just worked—let's say the back squat—and go at 50 to 60 percent of RM to work more volume. Then add more exercises that use an opposite or complementary motion, and a buddy-oriented component, such as 10 back squats at 185 pounds, 20 box jumps, and a 50-meter buddy carry. Repeat for three to five rounds.

strength so you can carry your load within a team. Training: Focus on total body movements that are functional: the dead lift, the back squat, the bench press, and the push press. Incorporate one of these moves into your workout each day, starting with a low number of reps at a high weight percentage. For example, one set of three reps at five percent below your repetition maximum (RM) and then three sets of three reps at 10 percent below your RM.

WORK CAPACITY

You need the ability to do an intense amount of work in a short time, and there's no better way to develop it than CrossFit-style interval training. Training: These exercises are almost the opposite of what we developed in strength and stamina. A standard example: Run 800 meters plus 10 rounds of kettleball swings, 10 push-ups, 10 air squats, 10 sit-ups, followed by another 800-meter run, done as fast as possible. You're working at an 80 to 100 percent intensity level, which you can only sustain for 20 minutes.

DURABILITY

This is the domain of prerehabilitation: keeping your body from breaking and training through injuries. Training: "Prerehab" includes sprints, yoga, mobility drills, joint articulation, range-of-motion drills, and classic Navy SEAL grinder PT core exercises like sit-ups. End each day's training with some capacity of durability training, even if it is just 10x100-meter sprints and some yoga, like a sun salutation.

Free-Testosterone Releasing Formula Sets New Bar!

SEE DETAILS BELOW

NEW SCIENTIFIC BREAKTHROUGH

Testosterone is a hormone that travels in the bloodstream, directly affecting the following:

98% of testosterone is BOUND (useless), leaving only an alarming 2% FREE and ACTIVE to address the essential characteristics that make you a man - building muscle, maintaining a healthy SEX DRIVE and more!

- Sex Drive, Erectile Function and Sperm Production
- Muscle Mass, Weight and Bone Density
- Hair Growth
- Heart Health
- Mood, Mental Focus and Cognition
- Immune System
- Energy

Starting at age 30, testosterone levels decline by approximately 1% every year. By age 50 or so, a man may have lost a full 20% of his total testosterone, affecting both physical and mental performance via lower energy levels.

DID YOU KNOW your body consists of both FREE and BOUND testosterone?

FREE testosterone travels the bloodstream unbound, while other testosterone are bound to various types of protein molecules.

BOUND testosterone is NOT ACTIVE and therefore CANNOT PERFORM the same role as FREE ACTIVE testosterone!

THE SCIENCE:

T-Release" is a proprietary mixture of natural compounds specially formulated in a patent pending delivery system that helps increase absorption using our unique LOZENGE TABS, allowing for greater bioavailability and efficacy of ingredients.

Unlike questionable testosterone "boosters", T-Release" is a ground-breaking formula that actually disrupts the binding process to RELEASE greater levels of crucial FREE and ACTIVE testosterone.

Best of all, it works fast! In a sample size of study participants on a twice daily dosing regimen of T-Release, onset of increased sex drive occurred within 2-3 days.

BOTTOM LINE:

T-Release" works because of (1) a patent pending delivery system for maximum absorption that (2) disrupts testosterone from binding to other molecules and therefore becoming inactive -T-Release" enhances the volume and lifespan of FREE testosterone!

How did you prepare?

Well, there are some things I can't tell you, for insurance reasons! But before filming we basically went through boot camp, working with intelligence, SWAT teams, and precision-driving experts. You know that anxiety we all have when a cop car pulls up next to us on the highway? That's totally evaporated, and everywhere I go I find myself wanting to hug cops.

Honestly, I'm not going out with the energy to get hit on. What bugs me is the people snapping photos as if you don't notice. At times you feel like a zoo animal.

Is there an assumption that you're always partying with other starlets?

Yeah! But you know what's funny? People think that if you work in Hollywood, you spend all your time hanging out at fancy parties with movie stars. But we spend most of our time on set, hanging out with the grips and electricians and caterers. That's our family, and the only thing people see us on is the red carpet. Trust me, we're not that fancy.

But fame has provided a platform to talk about issues that matter to you.

Absolutely, and there are a lot of things I'm passionate about, whether it's human rights in Uganda or same-sex equality in America. I realized I could have a dinnerparty conversation with 15 people, and I could use Twitter to have that same conversation with a million.

Being such a major activist, do you worry that your show sugarcoats some of the police's actions?

You know, I find it interesting that despite all the incredible things our servicemen and women do, on the news we only seem to hear about the bad eggs. But then you talk to the real police, and they want to smack the shit out of those guys. They're like, "Who the fuck do you think you are to wear a badge, you piece of shit?!?" There's nobody madder about bad cops than good cops.

I have family in the South, so playing Tansy feels very natural. Morning is hilarious to play because, living in L.A., I meet ridiculous people who are just like her. So neither of them is really a stretch.

Tansy is always dealing with relationship drama.

I know it sounds so girly, but connecting or laughing a lot makes us feel really close, and then I want to bang him.

Well, not to cause drama, but do you have any celebrity crushes?

Oh, man, President Obama is crazy sexy. I'm not just talking looks, but intelligence and wit. I'm drawing a blank, but I'm sure there are plenty of other presidents I would want to do, even though they may not be hot. Or terrifying. You have more than 20 TV credits. Is there one that was especially fun to play? I'm friends with the guys who do Men at Work, and they called me up and said, "We think you're perfect for this part." I trust them, so I just took it. Then on set I found out the character just left a mental institution and is nuts. I was actually flattered, because the crazier, the better.

Do guys ever recognize you from Hart of Dixie?

On to important things: the Twitter handle @MirceasBoobs.

I had the idea to give my boobs their own voice because it's a great way to acknowledge that they are part of my work, but that I have control over them. I love getting in Twitter fights with them and calling them names. I enjoy our intense relationship—and I'm proud of the following they've gotten!

Hometown Hotties finalist Grace, one of the stars of our newsstand-only lingerie special, explains why sexy undies just might be the greatest gift you'll ever get yourself.

What advice would you give to guys who are nervous about buying lingerie for their girlfriends?

Just buy what you would like to look at, because that's who you're doing it for anyway! That's all that matters.

Have you ever gotten lingerie as a gift?

Yeah, and I like it... if it's the person I want to receive it from.

What's your favorite style?

Dark greens and black, like the lingerie I wore for this shoot, are really hot. And lacy and kind of see-through.

Is the fancy stuff just for special occasions, or would you pull it out during the week?

I don't think lingerie should be only for special occasions, because you gotta try to look good all the time.

Were you ever in a situation where a guy couldn't get a complicated piece of lingerie off? Not really. I'm there to help!

What asset do you like to show off the most? I guess I would have to say my boobs.

BEER PONG

You Need

- Two teams of two people
- A table
- 2218-oz. plastic cups
- Ping-Pong balls
- Beer

SETUP AND RULES

1. On each side of the table, teams arrange 10 cups like bowling pins. Fill each a third of the way with beer. Pour water into remaining two cups and use to wash balls of any frat-floor debris (which tastes like body spray and vomit). 2. Teams take turns trying to toss or bounce balls into their opponents' cups. Each team gets two attempts per turn; elbows and wrists must stay behind the edge of the table. 3. If a tossed ball lands in a cup, opponent must drink it. If a bounced ball is sunk, opponent must guzzle two cups. Note: Defenders are allowed to swat away bounced shots after they hit the table.

2 FLIP CUP You Need

- Two teams of an equal number
- 2. The first players on each team chug their beers. When finished, they hang the empty cup off the table game. Grab a napkin and wipe the beer slobber off your face. You earned it!

4. If a team sinks both balls, they earn another turn.

Otherwise, balls are passed to the other team, usually while joking about their testicles.

5. After a cup is emptied, it is removed from play. Cups are reracked when down to six, four, three, two, and one. 6. When a team sinks all their shots, they're declared winner -and far too thirsty. Drink!

PROTIP Always wet the ball in water before you toss. It improves your shot; wet balls don't float around in the air like dry balls. It also lowers your chance

SETUP AND RULES

1. Each player grabs a beer and a quarter and gathers around a table. The glass is placed in the middle.

2. Players take turns trying to bounce a quarter into the glass. If the shooter succeeds, he chooses someone to drink and shoots again. If he fails, the play passes.

If the shooter sinks three quarters in a row, he gets to create a rule (for instance, you can't say quarter, must drink with nondominant hand, all drinking must be followed with a recitation of a stanza from a Maya Angelou poem, and so on). Rule-breakers must drink for the duration of the game.
 Continue until all the beer is gone, then play pinball.

by PATRICK CARONE photographs by TURE LILLEGRAVEN

Funny or Die video in which he hawks his own line of actual douche bags–to realize...you really can't help but root for Christopher John Wilson.

"NOT THIS TIME, COPPER!"

I'm sitting shotgun in a matte gray McLaren MP4-12C (top speed, 204 mph; 0-60 in 3.1 seconds) as C.J. Wilson zips south on California State Route 73. "There are usually cops at the bottom of this hill," he says knowingly, explaining why we've slowed down to just around the speed limit. After hanging out in "the warehouse," the garage in Costa Mesa where C.J. keeps three of his six cars as well as his many motorcycles, we're heading to Saddleback College in Mission Viejo, where the lefty will be practicing some long throws with Steve Soliz, the Angels' bullpen coach. In the course of our 30-minute journey, I get a crash course-no pun intended-in the player that manager Mike Scioscia likes to call "the most interesting man in the world." (Sorry, Dos Equis dude.)

Raised in nearby Huntington Beach,

he guy's gotta be a douche, right? He just married supermodel Lisalla Montenegro (see page 66 for envyinducing details); he recently bought a north-of-a-million-dollars McLaren P1 hypercar (to add to the Porsche Carrera GT, the Acura NSX, the eight motorcycles, and the other McLaren already in his garage); he's endorsed by major brands like Head & Shoulders; and at only 33 he owns a racing team. Oh, one more thing: He's a two-time All-Star starting pitcher for the Anaheim Angels with a killer arm and a $77.5 million contract. Total prick, huh? Not so fast.

Within minutes of meeting the shaggyhaired southpaw, it's clear he's one of the most obsessively driven success stories out there. He turns everything-from throwing a perfectly placed three-two breaking ball to nailing the apex in Turn 8 at Laguna Seca-into science, analyzing every aspect of a task until he's mastered it. Even wooing his wife became an academic endeavor; he learned Portuguese just to let her know he was serious. He's proudly straight-edge and has never had a drop of alcohol. Instead of partying with the rest of the team when on the road, he can be found taking meetings with investors for his burgeoning chain of Mazda and KTM motorcycle dealerships. (Wait, we didn't mention he's a successful entrepreneur, too?) And, yeah, he's really ridiculously good-looking (which helps explain those Head & Shoulders ads).

But he's worked damn hard for what he has, and he's made it all happen through an almost spiritual dedication. And it requires only a brief conversation about the charity he started for kids with lifethreatening illnesses—or the 38 seconds it takes to watch a totally self-aware Wilson was traded to Anaheim from the Texas Rangers three seasons ago. It was here that he grew up staring at his two favorite posters: a Ferrari F40 on one wall and Ken Griffey Jr. on the other. "I didn't want normal kid stuff," he says. "My dad and I had frank conversations. I said, 'I want to buy a Ferrari,' and he's like, 'It's about $100,000. How are you ever going to do that?' I said I'd play for the Lakers. He said, 'I'm six feet tall and white. You're going to be six feet tall and white. Let's be realistic. You're not going to be Magic Johnson.' So then I said, 'How about baseball?'"

C.J. Wilson was never the best kid in Little League. Back at the warehouse, his dad pays an impromptu visit, and he's more than happy to share some tales from the old days. ("You'll probably have to remove the curses," C.J. jokes.) Much like his son, Jeff Wilson is soft-spoken yet intense, and quick to reveal that his son wasn't always an All-Star. "I remember he was trying out for a travel team, and the coach said, 'He's not big enough. He doesn't throw fast enough.' I wonder what that coach is doing now, watching TV while C.J. makes $70 million. I always say, 'Little minds for a little league.'"

As is often the case with such passions, a love of cars runs in the family; C.J.'s grandfather was a gearhead, and dad worked on a pit crew. "That was before Little League took over," Papa Wilson laughs. "He and his brother were around typical of all bazillionaire pro athletes. Something else that helps C.J. stay focused is his no-booze, no-drugs lifestyle. He's got STRAIGHTEDGE tattooed on his ribs and the Japanese characters for "poison-free" etched on his shoulder. Having dealt with family members with addiction problems growing up, he simply never saw the appeal of that kind of partying. "The other guys on the team, they hit the bars, they hit the clubs. I don't do that. I try to save my energy."

It's an approach he shares with teammate Josh Hamilton, the once-in-a-generation talent who has famously struggled with substance-abuse problems. When the Angels celebrate a big win, they both do so with ginger ale. As Hamilton tells us, "It's always good to share something like that with a teammate. C.J. has chosen to be straight-edge, and I give him props for that." It's also a way of life he shares with a model named Lisalla Montenegro.

"We met through my friend Jimmy. He told me, 'You should really talk to this girl. She's totally your type.'" What Brazilian supermodel isn't some guy's type? "She's straight-edge like I am. Jimmy knew I had a different set of standards." That's not to say that courting Lisalla was easy. "When we started dating, I downloaded a language app called MindSnacks and learned some Portuguese." "He was being creative, different," says Lisalla, "and really showing that he was serious about getting to know me." C.J. then states the obvious: "It was a good decision, if you know what I mean."

races a lot–it was an inexpensive Friday night–but I wasn't encouraging them to be drivers." Why? "I saw too many accidents. Plus, there are very few people who make money doing it. It's like being a rock musician: There's the Rolling Stones, then there's a whole lot of people who play in bars for drinks and a meal."

BACK IN THE MCLAREN, C.J. TAKES A CALL

from a business associate from his team, C.J. Wilson Racing. Founded in 2010, they've already won a championship, the 2012 Playboy Mazda MX-5 Cup, and just got back from the Rolex 24 in Daytona. (Racing works a lot like baseball, with these smaller outfits like Triple-A compared to NASCAR's Sprint Cup teams.) C.J. is involved in every aspect of the team, from the sponsors to the mechanics to the drivers.

Although he's loved cars his whole life, mind, as evidenced by the fact he named his Twitter account, one of the first by a major leaguer, @str8edgeracer, not @ str8edgepitcher. (A self-professed tech geek, C.J. is currently obsessed with the trivia app QuizUp. Warning: Don't take him on in dinosaur names!)

Tyler McQuarrie, a team driver and close pal who's known C.J. since he first coached him in track driving in'08, immediately knew his new student was serious. "He progressed much faster than most. I think that's due to the way C.J. looks at baseball. There's a lot of physics involved in both sports, which he's very interested in." McQuarrie thinks running the team helps C.J.'s pitching. "If he has a bad game, without the racing team he wouldn't have anything to pull himself away."

"Oh, I love dealing with the team and my dealerships between games," C.J. says. "They give me something else to pay attention to." Working a job that requires traveling helps as well. "I meet with sponsors and manufacturers all over the place," he says as if this sort of behavior is

"If we can pitch better than last season and get Hamilton and [Albert] Pujols back to where they were," he says, referring to the Angels superstars, who struggled in 2013, "we're going to win a lot of games." We also talk about what's next for C.J., after his life in the bigs is over. Will managing the always-growing racing team and ever-expanding dealership chain be enough? Nope. "Once I'm done with baseball, my first order of business is to get into racecar-driver shape-180 pounds, down from 210. It'll be easy; the only reason I'm this big is baseball. You need big legs to pitch, but not to drive a car-it ruins your center of gravity ... "

McQuarrie already knows it's going to happen. "If he didn't have his contract commitment, he'd be out here racing with us now. Honestly, I look at him as a racecar driver who plays baseball."

We're very happy to introduce you to his stunning other half, Lisalla Montenegro (or Mrs. Wilson, if you prefer). The bodacious Brazilian—and soonto-be face of Lexus—was kind enough to share these pictures from their recent honeymoon in her home country. As for why she looks so comfortable, you can thank the photographer... that damn C.J. Wilson!

Wow, C.J. is quite a photographer! He knows my body well, all my good angles. Plus, Brazil is such a beautiful place, and it felt like we had the whole beach to ourselves. It was us and turtles.

We know C.J. charmed you by learning Portuguese, but did you hear any bad pickup lines in your single days?

Usually at the gym: "So where are you from?" "How long have you been working out here?" "I have a cool exercise to show you ... " Oh, baby!

Any tips for our readers on how to date or marry a supermodel?

Supermodels have seen everything around the world, and there isn't much that can impress them, so be creative.

You're in unbelievable shape. How do you do it?

I love working out, and I get bored easily, so I'm always trying new things. I've tried everything from jujitsu to Pilates, but eating healthy is the whole key. It's easier when both of us have a lot of discipline in that regard.

What part of your body are you most proud of?

I'm very proud of my Brazilian curves. My modeling agency isn't always thrilled, though!

Do you love cars as much as C.J.?

I love driving, and I'm working on getting my racing license, but only one of us makes racecar noises at home, in the car, and at the store.

Well, I don't think we ought to get involved in what I deserve credit for. I appreciate it, but it's going to bleed over into my personal life, and I would have to tell you how many people haven't called me back that should have to say, "Hey, thanks!"

What type of player are you?

I'm a guy I have to ask not to come back.

At two separate times you had an television in the daytime. Although the real Icon is whatever woman is on the page before this interview.

What are you watching?

I suppose this won't be timely by the time this prints, but it is hilarious watching CNN bouncing around between the State of the Union address and the snowstorm in Atlanta. You can't tell what they're showing. Is the person shivering because they're a Republican reacting to the speech, or are they someone stuck on the side of the freeway? And they haven't really tied it together as a metaphor for our country, but they show wheels spinning in the snow, and then you have this sweeping view of Congress and you just see the wheels spinning again.

I can't get the theme song to It's Garry Shandling's Show out of my head. What should I do?

I'll give you life advice here: Become one with it and then eventually let go. When we're done and I hang up, that's when it stops. You did the right thing: I'm the source of your pain, and this interview is about you and your issues with me.

Do you enjoy your status as an elder statesman of comedy?

You know, Vince Vaughn has, for many years, had the nickname Sheriff for me, and I honestly do enjoy the respect. But I've been trying to get Vince to up the Sheriff. So maybe he'll get the idea after he reads this.

Do you have a nickname for him?

I have two nicknames. But they're bedroom names that I can't repeat here.

You play Senator Stern in Captain America: The Winter Soldier.

Yes, I do a cameo in this movie. I think an Icon should keep it short. I didn't even have the whole script because ... Icons, we just don't need it.

So you didn't even know that this is a comic book movie? You're kidding!

You have a legendary Hollywood

One of Jay Leno's great strengths is his stamina, and I couldn't see myself doing this for 30 years. I'm not a man of longterm commitment. And now what you have in Jimmy Fallon is a different kind of artist who is as phenomenal as we've seen in years. I'm a big fan.

Is boxing still a passion of yours?

Yes, but I just eased up because-this is not something you hear pro boxers say-I had some digestive issues recently, [laughs] so I didn't want to take a punch to the stomach. But I'll be back.

You've been known to pop up onstage. What's been on your mind?

Well, recently I went on and thought, I don't know what people see in me, but a lot of my friends say, "Isn't it time to get a dog?" I always remember George Carlin's saying that when you buy a dog, you're buying a little tragedy. The pain of when they pass away is unbearable. But as I'm getting older, I think I'll wait a few more years and then get a dog so he's got a little something to worry about. I'd like to see concern in his eyes going, "How's this going to end up?" And, uh...I didn't know of TV's greatest comedies, but I don't think you get enough credit for the whole "celebrities playing horrible versions of themselves"

HISTORY'S MOST DARING ESCAPES

Wrongfully (or rightfully) imprisoned? As history shows, time plus creativity plus a good spoon equals freedom. Take a look back at the most death-defying, audacious, and insane ways prisoners made their own get-out-of-jail-free cards. by ADAM LINEHAN

YEAR 1962 ESCAPEES Frank Morris, Clarence Anglin, John Anglin PRISON Alcatraz, California

Situated on a tiny island in San Francisco Bay, Alcatraz was notoriously America's most inescapable prison, housing the likes of Al Capone, "Machine Gun" Kelly, and the Birdman of (wait for it) Alcatraz. Before Frank Morris and the Anglin brothers fled, 31 inmates had attempted escape, all resulting in death or recapture. Using spoons to tunnel into the cell vent (1), Morris and the Anglins executed the prison's most brazen escape attempt ever. On the night of June 11, after six months of planning, they placed papier-mâché dummies in their beds (2), climbed to the Alcatraz roof and over a security fence (3), and then took to the frigid bay waters in a raft made from prison-issue raincoats (4)...only to vanish. A 17-year investigation concluded that the men had drowned; their bodies, however, have never been found.

Determined to raise awareness of the atrocities of Auschwitz, Jewish prisoners Rudolf Vrba and Alfred Wetzler hatched a plot to escape, hiding for three days beneath a woodpile located between the inner and outer fences encircling the camp and using gasolinesoaked tobacco to throw guard dogs off their scent. Knowing that once news of their escape broke, guards would sound the alarm, the pair waited in total silence. On the fourth day they emerged and fled to Slovakia, where they wrote the Vrba-Wetzler Report, alerting the world to the tragedy of the Holocaust.

After a string of bank robberies, the infamous John Dillinger found himself in Lake County Jail awaiting trial for the murder of an Indiana cop. Authorities boasted that the facility was inescapable, but that didn't stop the wily Dillinger. As the story goes, he carved a fake Colt .38 from wood (replica above) and used it to scare a guard into releasing him from his cell. He then locked up the rest of the guards and fled to Chicago, where he plunged right back into criminal life. Well, for a few months anyway: He was gunned down by a team of G-men later that year.

his captors eventually threw in the bloody towel. All the while Gerard was orchestrating his escape, communicating with his confederates using invisible ink made from diluted orange juice. One night he hacked through his cell door and made his way to the outer mat, where a boat was awaiting him. Despite hands mangled from torture, Gerard managed to climb down a rope and into the boat, then rowed down ye olde Thames to freedom.

Stalag Luft III, Germany

When the Nazis constructed Stalag Luft III, the goal was to make escape virtually impossible. Barracks were set on stilts to discourage tunneling through the floors, and microphones were used to detect the sound of digging. But that didn't stop 200 Allied POWs from taking a stab at it. The Great Escape, as it's come to be known, famously involved the digging of three tunnels: "Tom," "Dick," and "Harry." Harry, the only one to reach completion, was tricked out with air pumps, rail systems, and electric lights, all made from scavenged materials. Two hundred POWs made a break for it—76 escaped, 73 were recaptured, and 50 executed. Ultimately only three made it back to Allied territory, two of whom were so enraged that they headed right back into service.

When he was finally arrested for his wicked ways, legendary Italian cocksman Giacomo Casanova was sentenced to five years in the Leads, an "inescapable" prison atop the Doge's Palace in Venice. But Casanova was not easily de-

After tunneling through the ceiling, the pair came upon one last impregnable door. Luckily Casanova could impregnate anything, and after being mistaken for civilians they were released back into the world, where Casanova spent the rest of his life making sweet love to everyone and everything.

Ever since he was first incarcerated in the late '90s, prolific French criminal Pascal Payet has taken part in three spectacular helicopter-borne escapes. In 2001, while doing time for murder, Payet and a fellow inmate were plucked from prison in a helicopter his buddy had hijacked at gunpoint. After two years on the lam, Payet headed back to the same prison—aboard a helicopter to pick up some pals he'd left behind, using a power saw and a rope ladder to extract them from the prison yard (above). Payet was subsequently captured, reincarcerated, and placed under heavy surveillance. Then, in 2007, a group of gunmen descended on the prison in yet another copter and snatched Payet up again. Two months later authorities found him in Spain and jailed him in a secret location, hopefully not next to a helicopter store.

Franklin Correctional Institution, Florida

On September 27, convicted murderer Joseph Jenkins walked out of a Florida prison using forged documents stating that his life sentence had been reduced. Eleven days later fellow inmate Charles Walker did the same. Luckily for Floridians, U.S. Marshals found the duo shacked up in a Panama City motel. Note to fugitives: If you're going to flee, try crossing state lines, OK?

YEAR 1983 ESCAPEES 38 IRA paramilitaries PRISON Maze Prison, Belfast

During the "troubles" of Northern Ireland in the latter half of the 20th century, Maze Prison housed those convicted of paramilitary activity, most of them members of the Irish Republican Army. Heavily fortified, the Maze was considered one of the world's most escapeproof penitentiaries. But in 1983 a group of IRA prisoners pulled off the biggest escape in the U.K.'s history. After accumulating a small arsenal of weapons, the inmates jumped the guards and took them hostage. A hijacked food truck then ferried the inmates to the main gate. Thirty-eight prisoners successfully escaped, leaving seven guards wounded-one fatally-in their wake.

1979 ESCAPEES Tim Jenkin, Stephen Lee, Alex Moumbaris

PRISON Pretoria, South Africa

In apartheid South Africa in the '70s, Pretoria Central Prison was the official site of capital punishment, and it's where Tim Jenkin was serving 12 years for distributing antiapartheid literature. To break free Jenkin and fellow inmates Stephen Lee and Alex Moumbaris spent 18 months carving 10 wooden keys, one for each steel door that stood between their cells and freedom. To ensure the keys properly fit the locks, the trio made countless dry runs. And it paid off, at least until they came to an 11th door. Using a chisel, they managed to break it open and, once outside, escaped South Africa and eventually settled in England.

Libby Prison, Virginia

During the American Civil War, 1,000 Union Army officers were incarcerated at the Confederate-run Libby Prison in Richmond, Virginia. A converted warehouse on the banks of the James River, Libby was infamous for its squalid conditions and high mortality rate. The escape began when 109 inmates chiseled a passage into an abandoned, rat-infested section of the prison's basement, then tunneled through the floor, resurfacing 17 days later under a nearby tobacco shed. They hit the streets of Richmond, and 59 ultimately made it back to Union territory, where they presumably smoked victory cigars.

ALMOST EVERYTHING ABOUT "CASTING COUCH" PORN IS BOGUS, BUT THOSE INNOCENT COEDS WHO THINK THEY'RE IN ON THE JOKE HAVE NO IDEA WHAT'S REALLY COMING NEXT.

he drive from Arizona State University's Tempe campus to the nondescript office in an industrial park behind the Scottsdale Municipal Airport is relatively short, 30 minutes or so. But for an 18-year-old ASU freshman from a small town in Texas, it seemed to take forever—and would prove to be the most fateful trip of her life.

It was a warm September night in 2010 when the young woman, whom we'll call Stacey, walked out of her dormitory in the heart of Tempe, hopped into the passenger seat of a car driven by a middle-aged man named Eric Whittaker, and took the short drive north. If the two talked, Stacey doesn't remember the conversation, only that it was "uncomfortable."

Stacey's sense of discomfort was not misplaced. The stocky, otherwise forgettable Whittaker happened to be an amateur pornographer, one who operates at least two Scottsdale-based Web sites that make sport out of preying upon, and in many cases humiliating, female members of ASU's young, often naive, and overwhelmingly attractive student body. And Stacey, a thin, leggy blonde, was on her way to his single-desk office to be his "model" for the night. For one of Whittaker's sites, Backroom Casting Couch, the gimmick is simple: He pretends to be a talent agent who can help young models interested in porn make thousands of dollars a day by introducing them to casting directors. The catch is they have to have sex with him on film–for free–so he has something to show these alleged directors.

In his introduction to each video, the unseen Whittaker explains, "Backroom Casting Couch is a Web site about the real-life interactions that occur during adult modeling interviews," before describing in explicit detail what these models will be doing.

But then he lets viewers in on a little secret: "I'm not a talent agent...and there is no modeling job."

In Stacey's clip the scene starts with home-video-quality footage of Whittaker sitting alone in an office talking into a camera. He then goes into the hallway, walks outside, and finds Stacey waiting. He pretends to introduce himself–as if they hadn't just spent 30 minutes together in a car–and invites her inside.

The two briefly make small talk before he asks to see some ID. Stacey happily displays both her driver's license and her ASU student ID card–a move that later would prove to be a life-altering mistake.

THE VALLEY OF THE SUN HAS BEcome a magnet for this type of low-budget amateur porn. In addition to BRCC, there's Amateur Allure, the Lightspeed Media network, Aziani.com, Taryn It Up Entertainment, and countless others. There are gay sites, softcore sites, and big-time production studios all based in the Valley. Porn legend Jenna Jameson even founded her Club Jenna empire in the Phoenix Valley. Why do they come to the desert to set up shop? Well, one reason is girls like Stacey: cute young coeds struggling to make tuition at one of the biggest party schools in the country. That's where guys like Whittaker (who didn't respond to multiple calls seeking comments) come in.

Several young women featured on Whittaker's sites have been identified as ASU students, including some, like Stacey, so brazen as to display their student IDs. Whittaker's other Web site, Exploited College Girls, is slightly less gimmicky. There's no pretense of ignorance on the part of the women featured on the site; they're simply there for sex. But it plays off the same general theme: giving the appearance of exploiting young women. It's right there in the name.

Exploited College Girls doesn't exclusively feature girls from ASU, or even from Arizona. Many come from Florida, Texas, California, and other states, but they're often flown into Scottsdale to shoot their scenes. In each case the producer identifies the college–or in some cases the high school–that the young woman attends and then briefly explains why she decided to appear in a low-budget porn flick. The typical answer: money. But while many of the girls featured on ECG claim to come from schools like UCLA or USC, the majority identify themselves as ASU Sun Devils. as university administrators, who are desperately trying to rebrand ASU as the "New American University," an institution that's better known for its sustainability research and top-notch business school than for keg parties and porn stars.

In 2002 the university selected Michael Crow as its new president and tasked him with leading the charge. Shortly after his appointment, Crow was hit with his first of many porn scandals.

The previous September an amateur porn outfit called Shane's World decided to shoot a film at ASU in which female porn stars walked into frat houses and performed a variety of sex acts with the residents. They dubbed it a "sexual scavenger hunt."

Enter Brian Buck, a hard-partying fraternity brother at one of the university's most unruly houses, Sigma Nu.

In one of the Shane's World scenes, porn star Calli Cox knocks on the door of the Sigma Nu house and explains what she and the Shane's World crew are up to. Cut to Cox and Buck filming a shower scene together as his frat buddies chant "Buck, When Courtney Cox (stage name: Courtney Simpson) left ASU, she took her cheerleader outfit with her–and wore it as she had sex in a film called Gina Lynn's Double Dutch.

Once again the university leaped into action, reportedly seeking legal recourse against the production company for trademark and intellectual property infringement concerning the Azizona State cheerleading uniform. So it's not as if Arizona State has condoned this behavior–far from it.

But this brings us back to Stacey, the poster girl for the university's most recent triple-X headache.

SITTING IN WHITTAKER'S OFFICE,

Stacey knew she was in over her head, even though she was fully cognizant of Whittaker's "casting couch" gimmick.

Anyone who buys into the notion that his "models" have no idea they've been brought to his office for sex might as well ask him for a tour of his unicorn ranch, too. The models know Whittaker isn't a talent agent before they ever take a seat on his infamous black leather couch. They know he's not sending their "demo" to directors. And they know they're getting paid, typically $2,000, to feign obliviousness to the fact that they're about to have sex with a middleaged man in an empty office on the edge of the desert. In other words, it may be "amateur," but it's still all an act.

On the ECG site the producer describes Arizona State as a "bottomless well of exploitable college girls" that includes such Sun Devils as "Skyler," "Mindy," "Savannah," and "Ashley."

Eric Whittaker isn't the first pornographer to find a wealth of "talent" at ASU; the university and the Phoenix Valley have a long history with dirty movies, which has led to speculation that Arizona could become the next mecca of the adult industry. That has proved to be a thorn in the heel of local politicians as well Buck, Buck!" in the background.

Fast-forward six months and Buck is elected executive vice president of ASU's Associated Students. Before long the administration catches wind of the video and acts swiftly. After a full-scale investigation, Buck is evicted from Sigma Nu, banned from campus housing and employment, and placed on permanent probation. Today he runs an auto wholesale business in Oregon.

A few years later ASU had another scandal involving a university cheerleader who'd left the Sun Devil squad to pursue a career in porn, one that began with a scene with the Phoenix-based production company Amateur Allure. In Stacey's case, the hookup with Whittaker came by way of a convicted sex offender named Antonio Gonzalez.

Gonzalez was arrested in 2010 on charges related to child pornography, and he is now looking at a rather lengthy prison sentence after pleading guilty in November to sexual exploitation of a minor. But before getting pinched, he ran a less-than-reputable agency called Gonzo Modeling, which gained a degree of notoriety for grooming girls for many of the Valley's shady amateur porn operations, including Whittaker's.

New to Arizona, Stacey didn't know tact an attorney, Stacey gave in, and the next thing she knew she was sitting there in this crummy office with Whittaker.

After Stacey flashed her ASU ID, the pair engaged in a bit more small talk, and then, like many young women before her and many since, Stacey was naked on the couch with Whittaker standing over Stacey says. "Someone tells them they are pretty and should model, they believe them, and ta-da, these scam artists have them in the palms of their hands."

When alerted to the fact that there are dozens of women identifying themselves as ASU students on a raunchy amateurporn Web site, university spokeswoman about Gonzalez's reputation and was happy to sign a contract with him on the recommendation of another photographer she'd contacted when she started looking for modeling work.

At first the business relationship between Stacey and "Gonzo" was everything she'd hoped for as an aspiring model. "We did beautiful and very tasteful photographs before anything about porn was ever mentioned," she says.

But the trap was set. According to Stacey, Gonzalez then met her at the ASU student union and brought his pal Whittaker along with him. Stacey says the two presented her with a contract that provided her with steady work as long as she modeled exclusively for Gonzo.

In her 18-year-old mind, Stacey had made it: a modeling contract that would help pay the bills while she attended ASU on a $30,000 scholarship. She signed without blinking an eye.

But according to Stacey, there was some fine print she had neglected to read, specifically the part about having to have sex with a dumpy, middle-aged low-budget-porn producer on film.

Shortly after signing, Stacey says, Whittaker and Gonzalez explained the clause she'd failed to notice. But, they said, there was a way out. "[They told me] I had to pay a $3,500 fee if I didn't do it. I wasn't smart enough to know it was a scam," she says. Without the $3,500, or the sense to conher explaining that he needed to see her perform sexually before he could show her "demo tape" to casting directors.

"They can't just hire a pretty face," he explains when she pretends to resist, knowing full well what's in store.

Simultaneously, Stacey, who wanted out, was planning her escape.

"I was terrified," she recalls.

Reluctantly playing the role of a clueless wannabe porn star, Stacey asks if she'll be getting paid for the scene. Told "not today," she gives in, as scripted, and she and Whittaker get down to business.

While the drive to the industrial park had been uncomfortable, Stacey describes the ride back to her dorm as "a blur."

When Whittaker dropped her off, he handed her $2,000 "for her troubles." Stacey says she then went back to her dorm and cried. "I got sick after everything was done. I threw up for a good 15 minutes," she says. She told no one about her night on Whittaker's couch.

THE TRUTH IS THAT, DESPITE ASU'S

pornographic past, the university isn't a breeding ground for wannabe sex stars. It is, however, the largest university in the country, and pornographers have noticed that it's an easy hunting ground. "There are a ton of beautiful women at ASU, most of them from small communities around the country who don't know the dangers of assholes like Whittaker," Sharon Keeler seems to be in denial.

"There is no 'amateur porn industry' at ASU," Keeler says. "We are unaware of the situation you describe and are interested to know what information you have gathered and from whom that attests to the reality of an amateur porn industry in the area that is recruiting ASU students."

And it's true: The university doesn't have a porn industry; it just happens to be surrounded by one. ASU's own weekly student magazine ran an article in 2010 with the headline "Does ASU Have a Porn Problem?" It certainly doesn't help that the Exploited College Girls Web site features more than a few female ASU students or that the porn site Sun Devil Angels celebrated a nonexistent connection to the university until a lawsuit forced it to shut down last year.

Mike South is a 20-year veteran of the amateur porn genre and runs two amateur Web sites, as well as a porn gossip blog that's broken some of the biggest news in the adult industry. "My interview process is like this: I'm looking for reasons not to shoot you," he tells Maxim. "If it's a nice girl from a nice family, I'll ask, 'Why the hell do you want to do something like this?' I don't want a girl to do it for the wrong reason. I don't want to put myself in a position where she'll be coming back to me telling me to take it down." Ethan Singer, who owns an adult video store near the ASU campus, says the porn industry in Phoenix is different than it is in other cities–it's sleazier.

"A lot of the girls I know who did porn in the Valley–it's not like L.A., it's not like they're happy about it," he says. "Most of the girls who are serious about it are gonna go to L.A. or Miami, but there's all these amateur Web sites in Phoenix."

In Singer's opinion, several contributing factors have made Arizona attractive to amateur porn producers, Phoenix's proximity to ASU being one of them.

"If I wanted to," he says, "I could put up a Craigslist ad right now, and within 30 minutes I would have an endless number of girls looking to do it."

FOLLOWING HER SCENE, STACEY

returned to her dorm figuring the worst was over. In reality, though, the consequences of getting into bed with Whittaker, figuratively and literally, were just getting started.

She says Whittaker assured her that her video would appear only behind a pay wall on the Backroom Casting Couch site. What actually happened was that Whittaker blasted Stacey's video onto the Internet via free porn sites like Porn-Hub and YouPorn.com, where anyone with a laptop could view it. For Whittaker the only thing better than getting an 18-year-old ASU girl to have sex with him on film is getting an 18-year-old ASU girl to have sex with him on film and having the whole world know about it. Shortly after Stacey filmed her scene, a post appeared on gossip site TheDirty.com, which has broken some big-time stories (including that of shamed former congressman Anthony Weiner), about an 18-year-old who lost her $30,000 scholarship to ASU because she appeared in a porn film. But not only did she appear in the film; she also flashed her ASU student ID. The story had to be legit.

None of these sites bothered to check to see if the story was actually true, and it wasn't: Stacey never lost her scholarship; nor had ASU even heard about her video until it was reported in the media.

True or not, an ASU girl doing porn was nothing new, and therefore not a story. An ASU girl losing a scholarship for doing porn was.

A few other Backroom Casting Couch alums also appeared on TheDirty.com, and in several cases they too were pictured on Whittaker's couch holding their ASU IDs.

"I didn't know it was viral online until October 10," Stacey says of the story. "I remember the day very, very well. I had never even seen porn until hundreds of people sent me links of myself.

"I still hardly talk to anyone about it. I was very shy and embarrassed by the whole thing," she says. "I'm not the kind of woman to find myself the laughingstock of the porn world."

But it wasn't just the porn world. Shortly after she filmed the video, her friends, her family, the university, and the blogosphere found out about Stacey's trip to the and ASU's deans and presidents were very quick to talk to me to make sure I was OK," Stacey says. "I had the ASU Legal Department and Counseling and Consultation on my side throughout the process, and they almost immediately started sending legal notices of my intent to sue for misusing information."

As for what she'd say to other young Sun Devils tempted by the easy money that guys like Whittaker are offering: "Don't ever do it. It may sound easy, but it was awful, and I'm still paying for it today. There is always another option."

According to Richard Gaxiola, a criminal defense attorney in Phoenix, if Stacey's story about Whittaker threatening to sue her in order to fulfill their contract is true, then he has broken several Arizona laws.

"Procurement by false pretenses of a person for purposes of prostitution may even be stronger if her facts are true," Gaxiola says. "[If] a person knowingly, by false representations or other fraudulent means, procures any other person to have illicit carnal relation, they are Within hours the media, including London's Daily Mail, Gawker, and countless news services, were reporting that a student had lost her scholarship because she did porn. And they all featured a picture of Stacey holding her ASU ID. casting couch. The negative attention and endless harassment ultimately led to her leaving school, but not before a nervous breakdown and a suicide attempt.

"I came about two seconds from jumping off the Mill Avenue Bridge before someone stopped me and carried me to the beach park and made sure I called someone to pick me up," Stacey says.

For the record, she has nothing but good things to say about the way the university responded to her situation. "ASU was really great. The Arizona Board of Regents refused to comment, guilty of a Class 6 felony."

One local elected official in Phoenix– the county's top prosecutor, Maricopa County attorney Bill Montgomery–has vowed to fight the porn industry at every turn, accusing pornographers of engaging in prostitution.

Still, Gaxiola cites several "constitutional hurdles" that make it difficult to prosecute pornographers under state pandering or prostitution laws because there is no "customer"—the people being paid are actors who are not technically being paid for sex. Rather, they're knowingly being paid to appear in movies that just happen to have sex in them.

A lawyer could argue that Whittaker is technically a customer paying women to have sex with him, but given the language of the law, it would be a stretch.

In other words, with the state's lack of regulation of the porn industry–and with no shortage of attractive, young, naive women–shady porn producers like Whittaker will continue to flock to the Valley of the Sun.

CHICAGO

Crime lowlights: Ex-mayor Chester Stranczek helped pipe polluted water into constituents' faucets. Mmm, chemicals! • A husky customer bludgeoned a store owner with a bat for not carrying XXXL tank tops. • One thirsty perp crashed into two apartments demanding beer, then stabbed a wine lover with a corkscrew. • A pair of lovebirds did some stabbing of their own (nudge, nudge) on top of two corpses. And for the finale, a naked street dancer shattered a windshield with his ass, then dove into a mud puddle for a drink. Has to be better than what's in Chicago's taps.

Is it weird for men to post selfies? —Frankie Alvarez

I don't think so. Just don't post selfies from the gym. Put the phone down and work out. kissing a guy with braces, but I don't want to kiss a guy with jacked-up teeth!

How can I make my mom stop posting dumb stuff on Facebook?

Are beepers still around? —Damon Butler

I doubt it. But if beepers do make a comeback, it's going to be by hipsters trying to look original.

Office Assistant

She Drives Us Crazy

The road to falling in love with our office chauffeur was a very short one indeed.

11 A.M. Strict about the no-droolingon-seats rule.

RÉSUMÉ

NAME Júlia

BIRTHDAY July 17

HOMETOWN Portela, Brazil

HIDDEN FACT "I'm a triplet!"

GO-TO DRINK "I like wine and champagne. I don't like beer."

3 P.M. Most impressive parallel parking in history.

5 P.M. Hopefully your über-driver Fred isn't wearing the same outfit.

Should the Maxim staff be worried about putting our lives in your hands?

Ha, no, you don't have to worry. I got my license in São Paulo, Brazil. If you can drive there, you can drive anywhere.

So you aren't intimidated about driving in New York? People drive much slower here. In Manhattan there are police around, but in Brazil nobody really cares what you do. It's crazy.

What do you think about backseat drivers trying to give you directions?

I don't like them very much. You wind up getting confused. I'm the one in front, so please let me drive. People can sing for me instead!

Can you drive in heels? I leave them to the side and go barefoot. Then I'll put my heels on when I get where I'm going.

Ever get pulled over? Luckily not today! It happened to me once in Brazil, when I was underage and driving my dad's Jeep to the beach. I said, "I'm so sorry!" and he was like, "It's OK."

Don't think that would've worked for us. What's the sexiest type of car?

I love convertibles. That Infiniti I drove is a really sexy car. I like feeling my hair flow in the wind.

What's your policy on hooking up in a vehicle? Things can happen in a car. Let's leave it at that.

Eat Your Way to Sex

Can an aphrodisiac cooking class teach us the recipe for a forkin' good time? by STEPHANIE RADVAN

"What time does the orgy start?" my boyfriend asked as I left for an aphrodisiac cooking class in N.Y.C. A short subway trip later, that joke transforms into an ominous warning as I'm greeted by the man in charge at his front door. "Welcome to Sex on the Table," says Chef Fed with a heavy Swiss accent as he ushers me into his apartment. "We'll soon be making noises at the dinner table that we typically reserve for the privacy of our own bedrooms." Yikes. Who knows what these Europeans are into? I'm the last to arrive, and the other eight attendees are staring at me as Barry Manilow croons from the stereo. I begin to wonder if this night is going to end with me in an ice bath missing a kidney. Happily, that doesn't happen. Instead Chef Fed starts with some origin stories about the relationship between sex and food. Aphrodisiac myths date way back to the consumption of sparrow brains in ancient Greece. Aphrodite, after all, was the goddess of love and sexuality, and her totem was a sparrow, so eating little birds' brains was thought to help boost the libido. Romantic!

providing food will get us love. Take the potato. A couple hundred years ago, potatoes were vital to surviving harsh winters, so whoever had the most potatoes had the most dates." Fair enough. I'd be lying if I said there weren't some boozy college nights when I might have put out for a basket of fries. Food science is also a factor in categorizing aphrodisiacs. Watermelon, for example, contains an amino acid called citrulline that can relax blood vessels and improve blood flow, much in the way the active ingredient in Viagra does. Celery has and rosterone, a hormone that's naturally produced in males that stimulates arousal in women. "Chickpeas are actually the queen of aphrodisiacs for men," Fed says. "They are high in protein and low in fat and a great source of zinc, which is crucial to the production of testosterone." It's not lost on me that all these foods are also touted as healthy snacks, so it seems fair to say that a diet rich in aphrodisiacs may increase your lifelong ability to get laid simply by keeping you out of a Walmart mobility scooter. Enough talk—time to eat. Tonight's menu seems to contain almost half the 107 aphrodisiacs on his list: ginger-infused kale salad with a garlic-orange confit; smoky chicken stuffed with bacon and toast, topped with truffle foam and served alongside tomatoes, potatoes, and zucchini. And for dessert, white chocolate mousse with cilantro and raspberries. For someone who primarily subsists on Thai takeout, these aphrodisiac-laden dishes would have to be pretty potent for me to have the energy to do anything besides pass out after preparing this type of dinner at home.

FOOD EQUALS SEX

After two hours of chopping, mixing, and several more helpings of aphrodisiac intel from Fed (mangos make women's orgasms stronger; Tibetan monks were once forbidden from entering the monastery if they'd eaten garlic because of its reputation for stirring up passions), we dig in. The food is delicious, but the only thing that gets stuffed here tonight is the chicken.

Текст

Even though I didn't have a When Harry Met Sally... moment, I did give myself a pat on the back for not accidentally dumping an entire container of salt over the vegetables when Fed asked me if the reason oysters are my favorite aphrodisiac is because of "that little drop of seawater that runs on your chin."

I looked around the table and, while people weren't tearing one another's clothes off in a massive orgy, everyone looked happy. I'd bet that at least half the couples would be getting down tonight.

Later, as I exit my subway stop, something Fed said comes back to me: "Providing food will get us love." I popped into the deli and bought my boyfriend a Snickers bar, which I can now confidently report also works as an aphrodisiac (when paired with a great push-up bra).

SEXY SPUDS Fed presents an equally practical but more accessible argument. "Subconsciously, we know that
