he Carlsbad native has slipped back into being one of Frazierarts "It Girls" like she is slipping into a beautiful bikini...bodypainted bikini that is. "I was the number one girl for Frazierarts for awhile last year, but gave it all up because I needed a break to figure out my next carrier move." She left Frazierarts for a while to contemplate her future. Now she is back better than ever.

"It's like a college sorority," she explains of her time working for Frazierarts and as a bodypaint model for the Playboy Mansion. "I'm friends with all the girls, but there's always one or two you kick it with the most. They told me to come back and try it again." Amber's mom was a model and has always been very supportive of her goals. One big piece of advice has stuck with her though out her school and now her modeling carrier. Amber explains, "I had a difficult time in school. My mom always told me that you don't have to be good in everything. Find that one thing you really like and pour your soul into it. In elementary school, middle school and high school it was competitive cheerleading and now it's modeling.

That advice has paid off this time around. "There has been so much work it's hard to keep up with it all, she laughed. Modeling for Kandy Shop Bikinis, Karma, Pat's Legacy, various calendars, poster has her traveling all over. And now she can add Kandy magazine to her resume of accomplishments. "I never forgotten where I came from, she says. "After I started traveling all over the world as an It Girl, a lot of people back home said, "I'm surprised you haven't changed at all.' Sometimes it's hard to find someone who cares enough to listen to your success and failures. You might have to go back someday, so why change into something you're not? I'm totally down to earth."
