LIFE GROWING UP

Life was good growing up. I have an amazing family, my mom, my dad, my sister and I are all very close. My childhood was amazing filled with cottages and memorable family vacations, lots of laughs and fun times. One downfall to growing were my friendships, throughout high school and especially now that I am perusing modeling I have had a tough time finding a support system outside of my family and fan base. A lot of the time I have been called names or severely judged based on my lifestyle choice. It can be hard finding out who your true friends are. Seeing the small amount of people who have stood behind me from the friend side of things while I have been modeling has been a real eye opener. Even through the tough times and through the bullying though I wouldn't change anything it has all made me stronger. If someone can't be supportive I don't need that in my life anyways. I owe everything to those who have really stood by me I will always be grateful.

MODELING CAME OUT OF NOWHERE

It all started when I was asked to be in a music video two famous music artists. I said yes and was so nervous. When I go there the people organizing it were so kind and encouraging I had an amazing time and the experience then opened more doors for me. I have just continued to work my hardest and take opportunities when they present themselves. I am only 19 and I'm not done yet!

MODELING IS THERAPEUTIC

I absolutely love expressing myself through photographs, I really enjoy having fun while I work. I love meeting new people and travelling. Being a model I have been blessed with amazing opportunities to travel all around the world. I love going to new places and I cannot wait to explore some more! One of the biggest rewards of modeling is meeting talented people from all over. In the past two years words cannot even begin to describe the experiences I have had. I have shot with some very experienced, talented photographers and met some amazing models and people from the business. Seeing myself get published in magazines from around the world and experiencing the international exposure has been extremely rewarding and wonderful.

INDUSTRY CHALLENGES

Being in the modeling business is not always fun. It can be emotionally and physically challenging. Sometimes I feel like I can't even sit down I am so busy. Emotionally though it can be extremely draining. As a glamour model you are constantly putting yourself out there with no promise of anything in return, you are literally putting yourself on the line and hoping that people do what they said they would. You promote organizations and can only hope you get a simple thank you in return. Going into this I had dealt with some bullying in high school, put down for how I look, and people sometimes only assumed the worst about me through he said she said. More often than not when people get to know me they actually say "you're nothing like how I thought you would be". Going into modeling it has amplified being judged based on appearance even more, but I can honestly say I expected it. To other models, they may see me as not as good as them, some have put me down and have talked poorly about work I have done. Being a model you can also be told you aren't good enough for certain things or you don't have "that" look. It hurts to be put down, it can make it really hard especially when it continues and escalates and people continue to talk even when you're over it. But I have to remember this has all made me so strong and it has formed who I am. Because of how I have been treated in the past I am very thankful when things work out and even more thankful when I meet amazing and kind people! I always remember of all accomplishments and the amazing people I have met and it's all worth it.

MY MOTIVATION

I used to love looking at models in magazines when I was younger. My sister and I always used to pretend to be models and take pictures and dress up and we used to pretend to make music videos. Some people I was close with told me I could do it and I thought I would try, your only regret should be that you didn't try. I went for it and I couldn't be happier!

SCULPTING YOUR BODY

Your body is partially what gets you to another level in this business. For me, I go to the gym A LOT! I eat healthy, not just dieting but making sure that I am eating properly and healthy. I really enjoy going for walks and runs as well.

ADVICE FOR GIRLS WANTING TO GET IN THE BUSINESS

A message I would like to share with anyone wanting to model, is always be yourself, you cannot mold yourself into what someone else wants because tomorrow they could want something different. If your constantly changing to fit a look someone else wants it will only be a vicious cycle. Keep your look, keep a humble attitude, be kind to others, be yourself! If its meant to be it will happen just keep working for it! I always tell myself I want to be published as me and I want to be proud of what I'm representing. Don't get caught up in the negatives stay positive and stay humble! Take your challenges and make them strengths! Everyone is unique we all have a story to tell.

BEING FEATURED IN GLAM JAM MAGAZINE

I adore Glam Jam and the people who I have worked with behind the scenes! Thank you Pete Valentino for all of your help and for being so wonderful. It is when you see yourself published and meeting all of the people behind the scenes that you feel truly accomplished. I love Glam Jam and I am honored to be a Glam Jam Cover model!have met and its all worth it

DISCOVERY OF THE MONTH

GLAM JAM DISCOVERY

What a lot of people don't understand about modeling is that girls have lives outside of what is perceived to be the "glamorous world" of being a model. Modeling is fun, exciting and can be one of the most fabulous experiences there is, but it is hard work. And it is just one part of our lives. Very few models can do it as their full time job. Most of us have other jobs that pay the bills and others challenges in the varied parts of our lives. I always feel like I have several plates I am juggling, spinning wildly in the air, but I wouldn't have it any other way. I have several passions in my life, modeling being one important love, but not the only one.

For most of my life, fitness has been my greatest passion. I came to love working out and developed an interest in physical fitness because I was and still am a very active person. I am always interested in doing something. I was an athlete as a child and in school. It was while I was in school that I grew to love studying anatomy and physiology. During my college years a fusion took place that combined my active nature, my interest in human anatomy and my love of reaching goals as an athlete. I realized I was absolutely engrossed by the intensely personal nature of fitness training, that it forced me to keep pushing myself to higher levels of achievement and that anything was possible. After I focused on my own journey into better health, I realized I wanted to help others walk that same path. Now I am working full time as a personal trainer, am building my own brand of Fire Physiques and I teach others how they can be healthy, fit, and create the physique they have always wanted. But it has been an incredible leap of faith to leave a full-time management position in a gym to become a full-time trainer. One thing that has helped has been my modeling. I have worked very hard to establish a clear image of how I want to be perceived as a professional and who I want to be and that shows in my modeling. Last year I started entering Fitness Competitions and while it has been an incredible challenge, I find that it brings together all the things that I love about modeling and healthy living in a way that helps fuel my progress in a comprehensive way. Having all the parts of my professional life work together as a whole, makes me a more complete person.

Modeling is an extension of my love of fitness. Both go hand in hand in a wonderful manner. Ever since I was a little girl, I wanted to break into the modeling industry. I remember always telling my parents I was going to be a Victoria's Secret Angel. I'll never forget the day in college when I saw an ad posted on Facebook for a photographer looking for models to be the next face for her website. I was quite nervous about actually taking the next step, but after five minutes on the set and I was hooked. I loved every moment and was told I was a natural. From that point on, I've made modeling a constant in my life. I've been

Modeling is an extension of my love of fitness. Both go hand in hand in a wonderful manner. Ever since I was a little girl, I wanted to break into the modeling industry. I remember always telling my parents I was going to be a Victoria's Secret Angel. I'll never forget the day in college when I saw an ad posted on Facebook for a photographer looking for models to be the next face for her website. I was quite nervous about actually taking the next step, but after five minutes on the set and I was hooked. I loved every moment and was told I was a natural. From that point on, I've made modeling a constant in my life. I've been lucky enough to always have all the support I could possibly want from my family and friends. My parents always knew modeling was going to be a part of my life, and have respected all the decisions I made in terms of my career. As long as I remain happy, they all have my back and that is what has allowed me to have a VERY positive experience so far. I would like to continue to build upon my modeling successes like being featured in Glam Jam and find myself on the cover of a prestigious fitness magazine. My current achievements through Rick Trotter's studio far exceed what I ever dreamed for myself, and I know from this point, I can only continue to reach for the stars. Reaching for the stars means constant work and growth, just like it has in my fitness career, which is why those two worlds work so well together in my life.

Finding the time for all the other parts of my life, my family, husband and friends, along with my other interests that fill my soul is why it can be such a juggling act. Living life to the fullest, doing things that matter, that are worthy and that reflect what is important to me takes energy and commitment, but it is what life is all about. Five years ago, there was very little of what I have now either in place at all or was only beginning to take shape. But now I am walking a path that is as close to exactly what I have ever dreamed of as I could wish. It is my hope that when people look at the images of beautiful models, they look past the exterior and try to see what is beneath. Each of us has a story, some are tales of success, and others are sad tales. But they are the stories of the real girls of modeling, all of which start at a point where a dream starts to take shape. In my case, I am still juggling all of those plates, hoping to get that much closer to that dream being the complete reality.
