Editor's Note

The sexiest magazine ever for men brings you another issue of superb curves and beautiful faces. On this cover we celebrate the independence of women of color who are becoming their own CEOs in their respective fields.

Who better to represent the movement than Keyshia K'aoir (formally Keyshia Dior) who is the owner and creator of K'aoir Cosmetics? This former urban model entered the field of entertainment with a "no non-sense" and a "refuse to fail" approach to her career. She went from appearing in videos, capitalizing on gossip sites rumors, to dating celebs such as Gucci Mane and others, to creating a lipstick line and winning a fight for her independence and rights to her brand.

With the popularity of web photos like the annoying "duck face" and the Marilyn Monroe pinup style selfies, we figured that we would see how many likes we'd get on the newsstand from our "Instagrammy" of sexy girls having fun with their camera phones.

Sexy is as sexy does, so do yourself a favor and take this bible of beauty on home and read up on the next hottest vixens you might meet clubbing, shopping or dining right before she becomes the next hit TV, music or film personality.

At your level in modeling, what is the standard annual income you believe yourself and the others like you bring in?
Modeling is a tough industry and I would venture to say that most people when they get started aren't making very much. I've only really been pursuing this as a career for a few months now and have other jobs to sustain myself. Ask me in a couple years.

What's your side hustle?

I work as a bottle service attendant in my hometown, Hamilton, at Sizzle Nightclub, and I also do part time hair and make-up gigs. If you want to call that a hustle [laughs].

Has sex ever played a part in your career?

No, and I would never go that route. Sex appeal is the only thing that's helped me.

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?

No; although reality TV can be entertaining at times, I don't think reality TV guarantees success nor should some reality TV stars have been given success.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

My dream is to be an actress. Modeling is a stepping-stone and something that makes me happy. Ultimately, I'd love to be in movies playing some sort of super heroine like Angelina Jolie in Tomb Raider.

Hetero, Bi or Lesbian?

Hetero, but women are beautiful.

Why and why not?

This seems like a silly question. How would you or anyone answer that? [Laughs]. I am who I am, and like what I like, as should everyone else, no one fits into a single mold.

Favorite body part on your man: Every man is different. It's really about the way they treat me and those close to me. But, I'd have to say I enjoy a nice smile, coupled with strong arms and a little chest hair.

Craziest position: I wouldn't call any position crazy, but maybe that's just me and I haven't come across any [laughs].

Craziest place: I like trying anything once, but doing it in open water on a boat was pretty exciting.

Ultimate Goals

Game Plan: I'm going to continue pursuing my dreams of being an actress and having to travel around the world to exotic locations for movie/model shoots. I am going to continue to learn in acting classes, and pick up any skills that would keep me healthy and in shape for movie rolls or shoots.

Accomplishment: Seeing my name in lights. I know it's cliché, but it's my dream.

Résumé

At age 10, Emily Lodato started participating in local talents shows and showcasing her talents. She then went to study at a performing arts academy and, by age 13, she began writing music for the academy's musical. While in Miami, Emily began to network and branch out after working with vocal coach, Betty Wright.

She worked with Jason Derulo and began writing with A-list producers and then decided to study the arts of acting and attended the South Florida Acting Academy. Also becoming part of BMI and continuing to write. While attending the academy, Emily shot commercial and print work. In the midst of it all, she was still writing music for local artists and receiving placements. By the age of 20, music was her main focus along with writing all of her own material. From there she began performing at club events and opened for Pop/Hip-Hop artist, Mann, at events and also Pop star, Iyaz, showcasing her sound.

A single was released two years ago called "Listen to your Heart" featuring Flesh-n-Bone from Bone Thugs-N-Harmony. Emily also worked with Grammy Award winning Mastering Engineer, Don Grossinger. She is currently working on new material that will be released later on in the year.

At your level in modeling, what is the standard annual income you believe yourself and the others like you bring in?

Music is main income.

What's your side hustle?

Modeling.

Has sex ever played a part in your career?

No.

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?

No, but of course, it can help with it.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

I will incorporate the sex appeal along side with my music.

Hetero, Bi or Lesbian?

Hetero.

Why and why not?

I love women—they are beautiful—but not my cup of tea to explore in that aspect.

Favorite body part on your man:

Hands, smile and arms.

Ultimate Goals
Game Plan: My goal is to touch people with my music in all different ways. I am going to utilize modeling and sex appeal to accompany my music.
Accomplishment: Headed that way.

Achonti-Shanise

At your level in modeling, what is the standard annual income you believe yourself and the others like you bring in?

I don't think there should be a set number. I believe that it depends on how many shoots/videos/and parties you book. So, in that case your numbers will never be the same.

What's your side hustle?

Strip clubs and dollar bills.

Has sex ever played a part in your career?

Sex? Uh no!

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?

No, it's a 50/50 chance that it can hurt your career or it can boost your career.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

Hopefully it will lead me to become a household name and open up more opportunities for me in the entertainment industry as a whole, not just modeling.

Hetero, Bi or Lesbian?

I don't like labels. I've been in a relationship a few times with girls, and I still find them attractive, but as of right now, I live a hetero life.

Favorite body part on your man: I like hipbones and abs; they're such turn ons.

Craziest position: I don't think there is a name for it. But I was mounted on the wall touching the ceiling.

Craziest place: Parking garage elevator. Ocho Cinco!

Ultimate Goals

Game Plan: I want to act. I want to own a few nightclubs, and I want to open opportunities for kids in urban communities to reach their dreams and goals. I'm going to stay focused, invest, and keep working hard with everything that comes my way.

Accomplishment: If I set out a goal to do something, I get it done. I've been featured on many websites, I've done some videos, and I have been in magazines. I lost my brother in 2007, so my focus, my grind, my hustle and dedication has been dedicated to him.

At your level in modeling, what is the standard annual income you believe yourself and the others like you bring in?

I don't know about anyone else, but I have no complaints on this side.

What's your side hustle?

Hustler [laughs].

Has sex ever played a part in your career?

Only because I wanted it to.

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?

Absolutely, it's a great way to get your name and brand out to the world, and you can build your career up from there.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

To great success. I am blessed to be able to meet all the people I have, travel all over the world at such a young age, and learn so many things in between that will guarantee me success.

Hetero, Bi or Lesbian?

Bi.

Why and why not?

Because I want the best of both worlds.

Craziest position: With my legs behind my head. Ow!
Craziest place: In a movie theatre.

Ultimate Goals
Game Plan: I want to own my own spa and get into acting. I am going to continue networking with the right people and making all the right moves.

I am just now getting into modeling full-time. It was a hobby before because I was attending college; but now I graduated, so hopefully with my skills combined with my degree, I'll make a lot.

Modeling.

No. I keep things professional in my work life at all times.

I think that if you have a great team behind you, and you use reality TV to the highest advantage, it can definitely put a model in a position to become very successful. But, that person has to have the right people behind them that know what they are doing.

Modeling is going to open up many doors for me, and I see myself branching off into a variety of different things. I will continue to travel the world and meet great people.

Heterosexual.

I love gay people. I'll go to gay clubs and dance all night. I'm attracted to women, but I would not date them. I like men.

Favorite body part on your man: Body Part - chest

Ultimate Goals

Game Plan: My ultimate goal is to travel the world and take care of my loved ones. I really don't have a game plan, I have my college degree for back-up. I'm young. I am going to take life as it is.

Angel Brinks

Fashion Leggings - Custom Fitted

Article by Mannie Pendexter

Growing up under the bright lights of Hollywood, CA, Angel Brinks was always around facets of fashion. As a professional dancer rocking a one-piece for ballet classes or the shiny and flashy stage costumes, Brinks always was fascinated with the attire she and others in her field would wear during performances. There came a time when stretchy leggings went from stages to the streets. Ladies were rocking these curve-hugging pieces everywhere you went. However, the colors and styles available were limited. Brinks—who attended the Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising—noticed the void and banked on it. Using her unique fashion sense inspired by her days as a back up dancer for acts like Jennifer Lopez and Christina Aguilera, she got together some fabric and put together a collection of leggings, which she wore out to entertainment industry events. Once ladies in the industry got a look at the funky designs of Brinks' leggings, they just had to have them. The orders started rolling in, and the rest is history.

Today, the Armenian descendant and proud mommy of five-year-old, Azari Marquise, has become the go-to leggings and body suit designer for some of the entertainment industry's hottest celebs. Her clientele range from Hip-Hop stars like Lil' Kim and Trina, to reality TV femme fatales like Draya Michele, Joseline Hernandez, Erica Mena, Gloria Govan and Natalie Nunn, just to name a few. The pieces aren't only custom made for celebs, though. Angel Brinks Fashion Leggings offers ladies from all walks of life the red carpet treatment—from exact measurements to custom designing your pieces.

All shoes were brought by the models, mainly Christian Louboutin. Jewelry I've pulled myself at different boutiques.

BLACK MEN: Tell us a bit about your company, Angel Brinks Fashion Leggings, and how it got started.

Angel Brinks: Growing up in Hollywood, I was involved in the performing arts. Growing up in performing arts, that's mainly what they do like body suits and leggings, spandex and sequins—all of the flashy stuff that they wear onstage. I decided to take this material and put my design on it. I started wearing them out and everybody would be like "Where'd you get that?" I would be like, "Oh, I made it!" Everyone wanted me to make them a pair, so I started doing them for people and then it became a huge business, and I started selling them online. Then the customers started asking, "How do we match this?" So, I extended the leggings into body suits, and the girls loved that, and it just took off over night.

Aside from leggings and body suits, do you design any other pieces?

Yes, I do. I actually have rompers. I have dresses. I have exclusive sets. Those are kind of difficult to describe. I call them "exclusive" because they can be like briefs with high-waist sets. I also do the body suits that you recently saw on Beyoncé when she performed at the Super Bowl. It is still considered a body suit regardless of whether it has legs or not because it's still a one piece.

Are these pieces custom fitted?

Yes; and that's what makes my company different from all the rest. With the body suits if it's off anywhere, like in the pelvic area or on the shoulder, it can throw off the entire body suit. So, 90 percent of the items ordered from me are custom for the customers. And it's not just celebrities; it's everybody. Us as women,

"Diamonds Are Forever"

DRAYA MICHELE

"Golden Girl"

IESHA MARIE

"Vanity"

"Chains On Me"

we are custom made. We no longer come in one-size-fits-all. As far as designs go, celebrities sometimes will ask to have the pieces designed a little different. "I don't want my back to show." Or "I want to wear a bra." They'll give me a bit of direction on what they want it to look like, and I'll bring it to life for them.

How would it work for a regular gal that visits your site and they like a piece but they want to get the right size?

Well, I have a tutorial video online where I explain how to properly measure yourself because if it's a body suit, it has to fit like a glove. I offer them at no charge to submit their measurements. I have a lot of items that are ready to go, but I also keep a lot of material around for custom orders. We make everything handmade. All of the industrial factory machines we also have. There's a lot that goes into it. It's not as easy as it seems. It can be very easy or it can be very difficult. I choose to make it difficult, but that's what they love about me. Whatever they want, they get.

Where do you hope to see Angel Brinks Fashion Leggings a year from now?

Honestly, everything is going so fast right now that it's just unbelievable. I've had so many different offers for so many different things, and it all started from the love that I have for clothing. I can't even imagine where it could go. The sky's the limit. I would love to get into perfumes, maybe a kids' line, maybe a men's line, and shoes. You just never know what offer will come your way. I recently launched a lingerie collection. I'm running up against big companies like Victoria Secret and Frederick's of Hollywood. That's just what I'm striving for.

Is it nerve-racking knowing

BERNICE
BURGOS
"Kitty Kat"

DRAYA MICHELE

that with a lingerie line you'll be going up against giants like Victoria Secret?

It's actually not because I've always been a risk taker. I want to just take that step and see what I can do with it. There's so much money to go around that I'm not worried about any competition. With a huge company like [Victoria Secret] around it would just be interesting to see how far my company could go.

Angel Brinks' line is available at AngelBrinks.com (where you can find a list of street stores where it's available around the world) and cossamia.com.

Has sex ever played a part in your career?

The actual act of sex? No. Being beautiful and wearing bikinis and lingerie in photos is an act of over sexualizing one's self and catches the attention of men in a sexual way, though.

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?

No, it's hard to recall the names or faces of people who were on reality TV shows just three years ago. Nothing is guaranteed. You have to utilize that temporary stardom to delve into other facets of the industry to keep yourself relevant, keep your modeling career moving forward and keep making money.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

I'm using modeling as a platform to gain recognition and attention. I want to delve into acting, and I've also started my own promotional modeling company.

Hetero, Bi or Lesbian?

Heterosexual.

Why and why not?

Because that's what I'm attracted to.

Ultimate Goals
 Game Plan: I plan on owning my own promotional company, and to be an attorney.

At your level in modeling, what is the standard annual income you believe yourself and the others like you bring in?

With consistency in this industry, I believe that a model at my level can bring in a couple grand a year. The more you market yourself and stay active in the modeling industry you can almost guarantee your income will increase.

What's your side hustle?

Modeling is my side hustle. My main hustle is my current pursuit of a medical degree.

Has sex ever played a part in your career?

My modeling career or civilian career? Nevertheless, with my modeling career it hasn't, but it has with my civilian career. My job can be a bit stressful, so just like any other woman with a healthy sexual appetite, what's lacking or booming in my personal life affects how I act in every other part of my life.

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?

If you're the one in the spotlight with the right looks and team behind you, most definitely. Marketing is everything, and with an attractive woman that's already been exposed to the public eye, the marketing simply produces itself. The fan base is there, a story is there, and the public thirst to see and know more about her would be rising. It's all quite genius.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

I believe that it'll lead me to fun, unique opportunities that would allow me to travel, make money and just be appreciated for being me. Did I mention the money? It's all too dope being paid to just be who you are while looking fabulous at it! I just tend to just enjoy what I'm blessed with and be thankful I had a chance to succeed at what I have thus far. And, at least later down the line I will have my career to clutch and prosper at.

Hetero, bi or lesbian?

Hetero.

Why and why not?

I'm heterosexual because I love men of course. I'm not bi, or lesbian simply because I haven't let my curiosity get the best of me...yet.

Favorite body part on your man.

I don't have a favorite part; I just love them to be tall and strong. But, I don't mind a set of abs to be part of the ensemble [laughs].

Craziest position:

I don't consider what I've tried to be crazy. My mind wasn't blown from a wow factor position. So, all that counts with me is the magical finish! Ta-dah! [Laughs].

Craziest place:

Sauna. Hot...literally. I know, but we didn't care!

Ultimate Goals

Game Plan: I want to graduate, prosper in modeling, travel, love and enjoy every bit of my life! I plan to study, keep it tight and right, take risks, be happy and move forward.

Accomplishment: Having school paid for and actually successfully passing my classes is an accomplishment. Taking a stab at being a model and actually still being relevant since my first publication is an accomplishment. But, now being in Black Men magazine is a new accomplishment!

At your level in modeling, what is the standard annual income you believe yourself and the others like you bring in?

I believe it is between $2500 to $4000.

What's your side hustle?

Makeup and lash artist.

Has sex ever played a part in your career?

No.

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?

It can, and it does, but in order to have a successful career it is based on the person as a whole. How much drive that person has to take it all the way to the top. It is the person that makes the career not the career that makes the person.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

Eventually on the big screen playing in movies, being in more magazines, hosting events along with doing makeup and lash extension for celebrities.

Hetero, Bi or Lesbian?

Hetero.

Why and why not?

I love men.

Favorite body part on your man: I love all parts of a man's body especially fit men.

Craziest position: Doggie Style

Craziest place: On a glass elevator.

Ultimate Goals

Game Plan: I plan on pursuing modeling all the way to the big screen. I want to have my own makeup and hair extension line and a salon by 2014.

Accomplishment: I've graced several major magazines. I am a makeup and lash artist.

At your level in modeling, what is the standard annual income you believe yourself and the others like you bring in?

At my level I'm not sure how much because I just started this hobby of modeling, but come to me next year and I'll have an answer. I hope you guys aren't with the IRS [laughs].

What's your side hustle?

Well, first I am a nail technician at Nail Lounge, and for my side hustle, I am a go-go dancer. I do two of the things I love the most. Nails today are a big trend and a form of expression. I love when I can take a woman out of her shell and make her feel fabulous. As a young girl, music was always my sanctuary. I loved to get lost in the music. It's what kept me well grounded in this crazy world we live in.

Has sex ever played a part in your career?

Sex has never needed to play a part in how my life is destined. I have too much to offer to sell myself so short. I feel only an insecure woman would trade sex for an opportunity.

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?

Reality T.V could help boost a modeling career, but all depending on how you put yourself out there to the public.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

To me modeling is a hobby but if something more comes along with it—like acting—I will definitely appreciate it and run with it.

Hetero, bi or lesbian?

Heterosexual.

Why and why not?

What can I say? I love the way my man does it too much to pass it up!

Favorite body part on your man: I love my man entirely. He's my favorite.

Craziest position: I don't know where to start.

Craziest place: While he's driving.

Ultimate Goals

Game Plan: I plan on opening my own nail salon. I'm going to work hard and stay focused. Accomplishments: I'm only 21—give me time.

Keyshia Ka'oir

All the Way Glam

Crew - Vengemedia

By Dove "Sheepish Lordess of Chaos"

From modeling to make-up, Keyshia Ka'oir is no doubt a diva of many trades. Known to many in the Hip Hop world as Keyshia Dior, this Miami fashion maven has experienced a fast rise to success through creative vision and determination.

In her 2011 documentary, Building the Brand, Keyshia speaks on her rise from busy model and stylist to the CEO of her own cosmetics company. But even with her tremendous business growth, Keyshia still finds time to show off her amazing figure and styling skills in videos for the likes of Yo Gotti, and even flexed some lyrical skills of her own this year.

Black Men found some time in Keyshia's hectic schedule to learn more about her colorful style and meteoric rise to the top.

Unitard-Hustler, Shoulder Chains-Laurel Luxe, Accessories-Rich Girlz, Shoes-Christian Louboutin, Shades-Salvatore Ferragamo, Glove by Skingraft @Untitled NYC, 27 West 8th St. NYC

BLACK MEN: Last year you changed your name from Keyshia Dior to Keyshia Ka'oir. What is the significance behind the name change?

Keyshia Ka'oir: I changed my last name from Dior to KA'OIR to stand behind my brand 100 percent.

What inspired you to start a cosmetic line with such bold, fashion-forward color palettes?

I started KA'OIR Cosmetics because I always wanted to wear blue lipstick, and it was nowhere to be found. That's really what gave me the idea to start such a bold line. I figured if I'm looking for bold colored lipstick and can't find it anywhere, then there had to be more women out there that felt the same.

What is more challenging as a career: modeling in front of the camera, or directing other models with your brand behind the camera?

I must definitely say directing other models behind the camera for my brand is more challenging, because I have to make sure everything's on point with all the models, from makeup to wardrobe, etcetera. When I'm modeling, it's just me, and that company has to oversee their shoot. But when it's my shoot I have to oversee everything, which is more difficult.

You've appeared in several music videos, you have regular gigs hosting events, and you even started recording your own music. What do you like most about being in the limelight? What do you like least about the fame?

What I like most about the limelight is, when you're having a bad day, your fans are always there cheering you on, without even knowing it. What I like least is, people always expect you to be perfect, they seem to forget that we are all just normal people where we make mistakes and have bad days.

What do you feel is the most empowering thing about running your own businesses versus working for other people on their vision?

Everything about running your own business is amazing. Just being your own boss, and the independence of it. You give orders versus taking them. Plus, I like to be in control of my money. I'd rather pay someone than getting paid.

What is the biggest lesson you've learned through your career growth, how did you learn it, and what was the result of the lesson?

I've learned that everyone has a motive—no one is really willing to help you for free. I've also learned that no one wants to help you until you've made it, and at that point you no longer need their help. At the end of it all, you cannot take any of it personal.

What do you want people to know most about you as a woman, and as a businessperson?

I want everyone to know I'm just a young lady living my dream and providing for my family the way I always wanted to. As a businesswoman I'm very professional, I'm a perfectionist, and I take my business very seriously.

At your level in modeling, what is the standard annual income you believe yourself and the others like you bring in?

This is based on several factors and dependent on type of work/project, experience and consumer reach, to name a few.

What's your side hustle?

Not necessarily a side hustle, but I went to college and I am a trained aesthetician.

Has sex ever played a part in your career?

Not at all.

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?

I would not necessarily agree that it guarantees a successful modeling career, but I have seen some instances where others have used it to leverage their careers.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

I truly enjoy modeling, but I am working to transition my career to film as well as a few other projects I am working on.

Hetero, Bi or Lesbian?

Hmmm... [Laughs.]

Favorite body part on your man: Lips.

Craziest position: I like to be in control.

Craziest place: Infiniti pool in Dubai overlooking the city.

Ultimate Goals

Game Plan: I plan to continue and surpass a successful career by doing more print and, eventually, transition to film.

Accomplishment: Being featured in high profile publications within a short period of time.

VIENNA AND STEPHANIA

FIRE BREATHING FEMME FATALES

Vienna and Stephania met four years ago at a gig in Belgium. Vienna asked where the restroom was and Steph went with her, they have been inseparable ever since. The 22- and 23-year-old performers travel Europe doing their awe-inspiring fire breathing and striptease acts, all the while building a reputation for themselves as a force of red-headed, fire breathing femme fatales to be reckoned with. Last June, they met the producers of The Black Tape Project in Cannes, France, and soon after the duo became the official face of The Black Tape Project's international shows. Now a part of the project, Vienna and Stephania will soon be setting fire to North America and the Caribbean.

Jamilah Rouse

To The Top

Photographer: 2020 photography

Hair: Sédric Lanard

Makeup Artist: The Enhance "Mooney" Cook

By Dove "Sheepish Lordess of Chaos"

California born and Georgia-raised, bi-coastal beauty Jamilah Rouse is more than just another pretty face. Even though she was already a busy mom and actress, Rouse took on the fashion world by launching her own hat line. Her finesse for style soon grew from designing headwear to running her own boutique, Monte' Bella, in Atlanta. But that's just the tip of the iceberg.

It's been less than a decade since her first design, and Rouse is already on her way to becoming a self-made fashion icon in the South. For her, it's all about balancing who she is as a woman and mother with the notoriety of being in the spotlight.

"People see me as being a mom of two, independent self-made young girl from the 'hood who took herself out of a bad situation and put herself into a better situation," explains Jamilah. "That's great and all, but they don't know that I have a sexy side too, so the image that they see is not how I feel or who I am. I'm a free spirit - I don't discriminate towards a lot of different things. I do what makes me feel good. So, that's the most challenging thing. Trying to be what people think you are and holding up that image. That's hard."

Like many people in fashion, Jamilah embraced her passion as a teen with her first job in retail. Through all of her ventures, the experience of working in a store stuck, and made complete business sense as her entrepreneurial spirit developed.

"I want to leave the creative stuff to the people that were born to do that, and the things that I see that are eccentric enough, I'll pick and choose different items to be in the boutique," Jamilah says. "I bring a lot of creative designers in, and they put their pieces on the site. I have a lot of connections in the [entertainment] industry to wear the different pieces, so it all falls into place."

Jamilah is always aspiring to grow, but quiet as kept, she already owns an accounting firm and a grocery store. It's no small feat to juggle these businesses, but Rouse asserts that motherhood is still the most difficult job she takes on each day.

"When you run a business, you make a business plan for it and you have projections and you want to meet those different quotas," she explains. "But with motherhood, I tell ya, there is no such thing as a business plan. Motherhood is totally unpredictable, especially when you're dealing with different personalities. Most of the time it's fine - you watch your children grow into the good people you want them to be, but you can't put a five year plan on humans!"

As her own children grow up, Rouse sees the importance of setting a good example in life. So, what is her advice for someone wanting to follow in her footsteps?

"I don't want you to do what I do," she asserts. "I want you to do what's good for you, because you only see what I do, but until you know exactly who I am, you don't know everything that I do. Figure out what you like... what's your passion? What's your niche? Enhance that, and be creative with your product, be more creative in your marketing, and that will take you a long way. I always say it's hard to be everybody else, because we're all created original. Be yourself, and people will love you for it. I promise."

At your level in modeling, what is the standard annual income you believe yourself and the others like you bring in?

I'm new to modeling, so with that being said, you can make a grand or two a month.

What's your side hustle?
I do VIP bottle service. Also, I just signed an endorsement deal with a wine company—Cho-co-late Wine. Look for it! And, I'm working on my own website.

Has sex ever played a part in your career?
Nope.

Do you believe reality TV guarantees a successful modeling career?
Not for everyone.

Where do you believe this pursuit of modeling is going to lead you?

To major things! It's only been a couple of months and I've been introduced to acting, and as I've said, I have a wine endorsement.

Hetero, Bi or Lesbian?
Hetero.

Why and why not?
That's just my preference [laughs].

Favorite body part on your man: His lips.

Craziest position: I have a couple.

Craziest place: At the playground.

Ultimate Goals
Game Plan: I want to build a major brand. I will stay focused and work hard.
