La Paloma

Ask anyone what the most popular drink in Mexico is and 99 out of 100 answers will be the margarita. That's fine and it is a truly incredible and storied cocktail. I can't wait to tackle that classic in a future issue. But, for now and on the heels of Cinco de Mayo, let's mix up an adult beverage, even more popular and indigenous to this country: La Paloma.

Its base is, of course.... Tequila.... Is everyone still with me? I know the very mention of the word makes many of you throw up in your mouth just a little bit. It rushes in memories of dorm parties, salt shakers, lime wedges and ½ gallon bottles of clear, vile tasting swill that costs less than the donkey bladder used to filter it. Sure, I've been there. What self-respecting booze-hound hasn't? But we're men now. We've grown up. File those memories away with your other mistakes and let's embrace this incredibly delicious and versatile spirit for the ambrosia that it is.

Unlike last issue's Daiquiri, not much is known about the origins of this drink. But legend has it that, after a hard day of toiling under the Mexican sun, an agave farmer was enjoying a glass of tequila when suddenly a dove (la Paloma, in Spanish) landed on the table near him and dropped a rind of a grapefruit. Sensing it was a sign from Dios, he squeezed the oils from the skin into the glass and the Paloma was born.

Now, tequila comes in a few varieties; Blanco, Reposado and Anejo. The difference being in the style and length of aging. For this drink, use a good Reposado... trust me.

Paloma Classico

- 1.5 oz. tequila Reposado
- .5 oz. fresh squeezed lime juice (approx. ½ a lime)
- Grapefruit soda to fill (Fresca, Squirt, or, if you can find it, Jarritos, from Mexico)
- Build all of the ingredients over ice in a tall, salt rimmed Collins glass. Garnish with a lime wedge.

Couldn't get any easier, right? Believe me, I've enjoyed this drink for years, as is, but I've also messed around with it a little bit. So, for your next fiesta, impress your senortia with my version:

La Innocent Paloma

- 1.5 oz. tequila reposado
- .75 oz. elderflower liqueur
- .5 oz. lime juice
- Grapefruit soda to fill
- Build all in a tall Collins glass rimmed with a mixture of chili powder and salt (50/50) and garnish with a lime wedge.

Hold on to your sombreros, amigos. This blend of citrus, spice and sweetness will instantly transport you to a powder white sand beach on the Riviera Maya. Check out the bikinis and enjoy!

HASTA PRONTO!

She is sitting on a white towel on a grassy area, looking back over her shoulder at the camera while holding a red cherry in her mouth. In the foreground, there is a large red Coca-Cola bucket with a silver handle and a vintage-style Coca-Cola logo. Next to it are several red cans of Coca-Cola. The background is a soft-focus view of green trees and foliage. The entire image is framed by a red border on the left and top edges.

GOLDEN HOUR EVERY HOUR

A model's journey to Lala Land by Korbi Kay

“Yeah, it’s cold out today,” a muscle-tanked Los Angelite pouts into his phone as we both leave the gym, “It’s like, 65°.”

I can’t help but grin and nod to myself. These people are my people, and they are pulsing with passion: artists, sun worshippers, fitness fanatics, and culture connoisseurs.

For years, I endured incessant rain in Eugene, Oregon while completing my degree. To stay sane, I sought refuge in creative endeavors like modeling. Despite the small town and weary weather, I eventually discovered others who shared my interest in creating inspirational images. Some of these photo shoots were local, and others required a two-hour drive to Portland.

I managed to book a shoot through a small, local agency for the cover of a novel, get published in a Eugene Weekly spread, shoot for a college football apparel company, walk in the local Fashion Week, and even pick up small paid gigs through photographers building their portfolios. Some local photographers were generous enough to teach me lighting and technical tricks, and to give me a glimpse of the other side of the camera: through the lens, rather than in front of it.

During this time, I became close comrades with another local model and when she moved to Los Angeles a year after we met, I was intrigued by her experiences and in awe of her sun-soaked photos. I would talk to her for hours on the phone to stay sane in the rain; I was both daunted by her struggles, and seduced by the seemingly abundant opportunities. No, living in L.A. didn’t seem easy, but it did seem possible.

After finally graduating from the University of Oregon with a B.A. in psychology, I decided to take some time to pursue my passions before applying to graduate school. To follow my heart, rather than my head.

After deliberating among several sunny cities in California, I swallowed my fears and leapt into life in Los Angeles.

No, the streets weren't paved with gold, but they might as well have been. I went from being a big fish--erm, Duck--in a small puddle, to being a small nobody in a big city of someone's. Yet no one made me feel insignificant; if anything, I felt like people were trying to help me move forward, pushing me places. Despite the stereotype of L.A. being infested with money-hungry, ruthless ladder climbers desperate to "make it", my interactions with locals painted a much more precious picture.

The majority of artists here seem to share the same goal: to create and to collaborate.

While waiting to be seen at a modeling agency in the hopes of getting signed, another model--there for the same reason--struck up a conversation with me, providing insight on other agencies, as well as life in Japan (a destination on my Bucket List). I've always struggled with small talk, but it's easy for me to converse about my passions, and within minutes, I had made a new friend.

In addition to endless online castings, opportunities overflow abundantly on the streets themselves. While walking down Melrose, I met a clothing designer handing out flyers advertising his work, and we discussed shooting in exchange for an amazing baseball hat he designed (my suggestion; a very fair trade for a picky shopaholic).

After working at a grocery store in Eugene for over a year and getting paid minimum wage, I was delighted to score a part-job in Downtown L.A. for an online wholesale company. The hours are flexible, and I basically get paid $18/hour to play dress-up while shooting with a photographer who has become a dear friend. It's not as glamorous as high fashion or commercial work, but is definitely an upgrade from my previous jobs.

Although I've tried to avoid trade shoots and focus more on breaking into the acting world without going broke (taking classes, creating a reel, investing in head shots, contacting agencies, etc.), I can't help but cave when amazing photographers contact me about collaborating. My first trade shoot in L.A. became published in a magazine, adding another tear sheet to my portfolio.

Of course, L.A. has more competition, but if you're willing to put yourself out there and work hard without taking rejection personally, you'll stumble upon something. I was relieved to get signed to an agency for Print representation in November, and even more relieved now that they're sending me out on more castings. Timing, perseverance, and patience (my greatest struggle) are crucial for success here, and it's easier for me to be patient when surrounded by La La Land's daily distractions.

Not to mention that this glorious surplus of sunshine makes every hour golden hour. I find myself shamelessly taking selfies and pictures of graffiti as I stroll down the street, milking the free lighting.

The creative community in Oregon provided me escape and an artistic outlet: a place where we were all on the same page. I wouldn't have survived college, nor acquired the confidence to move to Southern California, without that.

I've only lived in West Hollywood for about five months now, but I feel like I've finally found my tribe and am in my element. My heart belongs to Los Angeles, so if that old cliché is true, I suppose I've finally found home.

FEATURED PHOTOGRAPHER

JAKE HICKS

Photography - Jake Hicks
jakehicksphotography.com
facebook.com/jake.hicks.photography

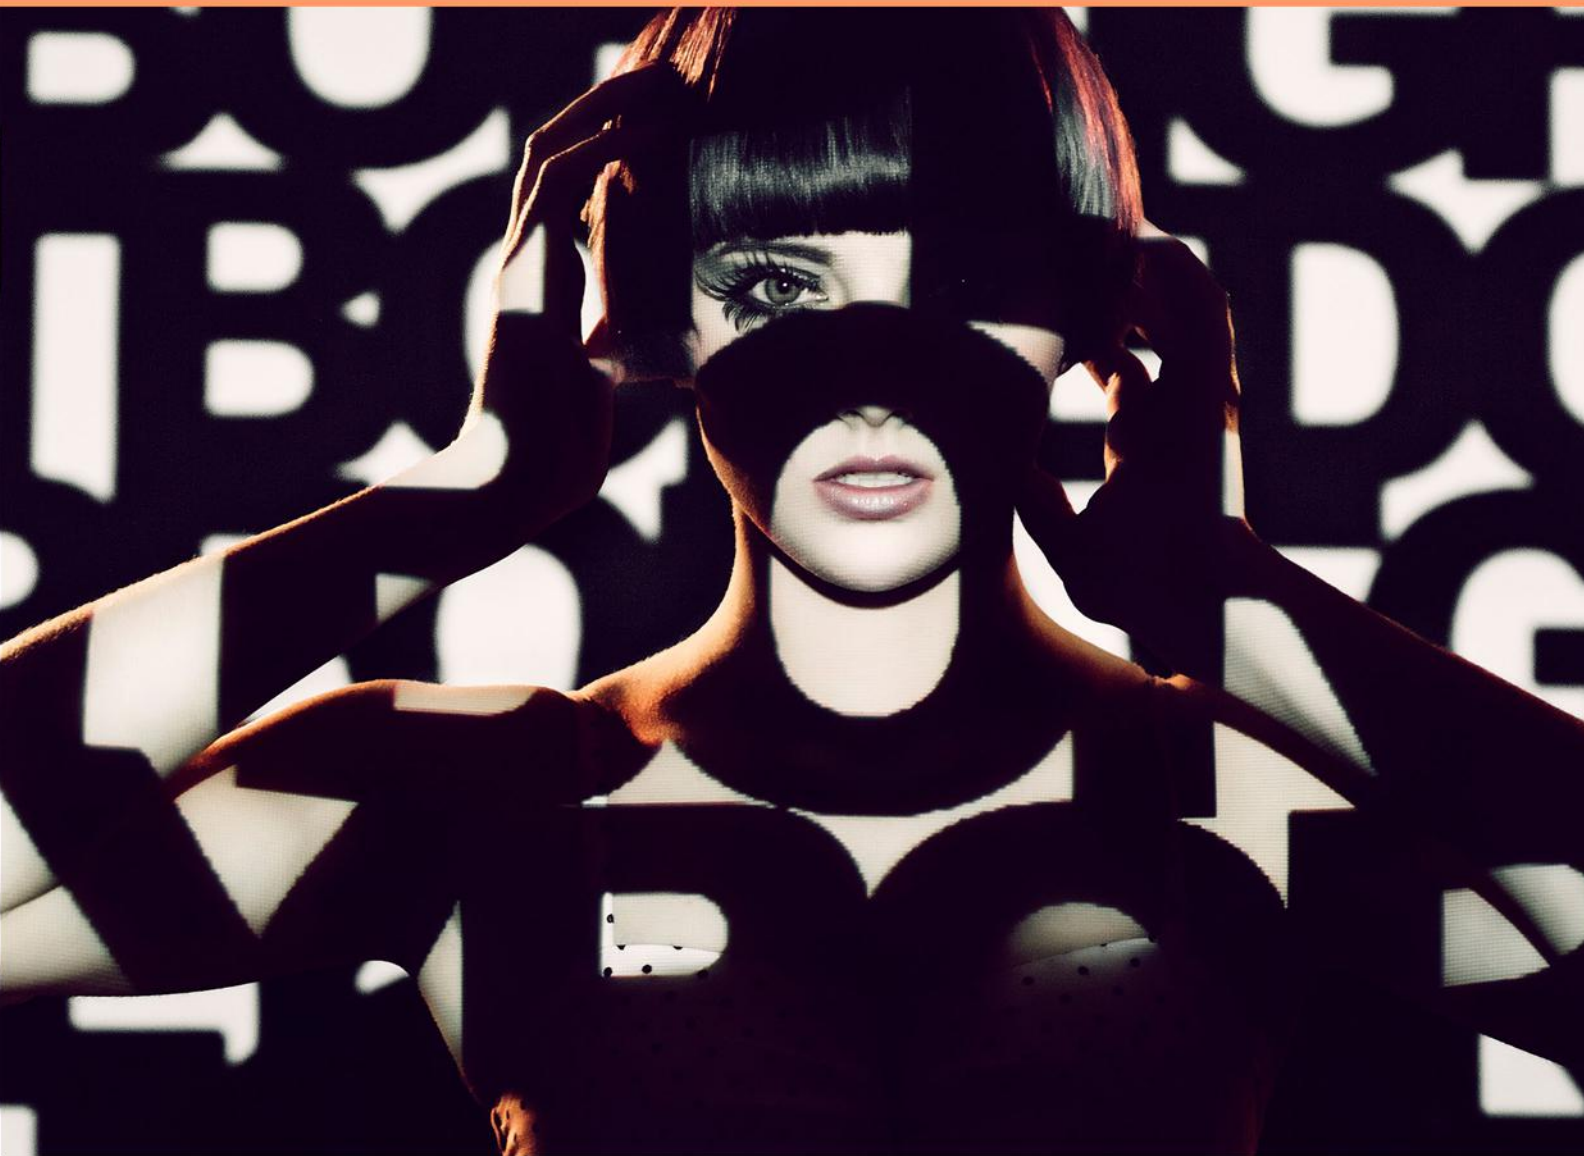

How long have you been a photographer?

How long have you worked with models?

I've been shooting commercially for about ten years. I started out when I left Uni and even then my first jobs were with models for hair shoots. Back then we were shooting loads of hair campaigns so you got to work with a lot of brand new models, some had never been in front of the camera before either so I guess it was a learning experience for both sides.

What do you enjoy most about being a photographer?

I think it's the process really for me, sure as a professional photographer you have to shoot strange things to pay the bills once in awhile but my passion definitely lies with photographing models. Yes its great to photograph beautiful women but they are artists in their own right too and I love the collaboration that happens in the lens. I'm pretty techie when it comes to lighting and I love it to be perfect but when we start shooting I like the shoot to take its own course and allow the model creative freedom to do what she's best at, you always get the best shots that way and I love it when that happens.

At what point did you realize that you wanted to pursue photography as more than a hobby?

Strangely it never was a hobby for me, It wasn't until I got to college and had failed everything else that I found my love for the craft. I have been extremely lucky with my education and have been taught by so many incredibly passionate photographers who really encouraged me so I carried it right the way through, did my degree, left and started shooting.

What kind of personality do you have?

How would your friends describe you?

Haha they'd probably describe me as pretty laid back, I'm definitely not somebody who chases the rat race dream. I love to chill out and have a few beers with friends and discuss ideas and theories and I'm certainly not somebody who enjoys the drama of being the centre of attention at pubs and clubs anymore though haha. Those days are long behind me now.

What are some of your other interests or hobbies?

Jeez this isn't pretty, but I'm afraid to say that these days I literally do eat, sleep and breath photography. During the day I manage a team of photographers in a studio then I come home and crack on with my own work. Retouching, networking writing my blog and then at the weekend I shoot some more. I know I can't maintain that forever so I'll enjoy the creative freedom while I can.

What surprises people about you, after they get to know you?

A lot of the time I think people expect me to be older than I am, I'm not entirely sure why. I think the industry has a large proportion of photographers who are exploring their 'second' career at the moment and as such they tend to be a little older as they have the time and the money to do so. Other than that I think people are surprised at how laid back I am on shoots. I'm fortunate enough to have been able to do this for over a decade now and there aren't many things I haven't seen happen on set so I like to go with the flow a bit more. Sure my work looks technical and involves a lot of kit but once its all set up we can just concentrate on creating the images relatively stress free.

Tell us about your first muse. How did she inspire you?

Hmmm good question and I'm certainly fortunate enough to have my first muse, the model Jaye in my portfolio as my partner now. We met and started chatting and it turned out she was a modeltographer so we really started bouncing ideas off one another. I'd been going through a phase of relatively safe and boring photography for a while, you know the guy who just records what's in front of him and I really hated that. With Jaye we had the opportunity to try things and make mistakes and most importantly learn from them, something that is becoming more and more devoid in this digital age. After that I never looked back and kept pushing myself to always try something different in each and every shoot.

If you could photograph any model (living or dead), who would it be? Why?

It's got to be Coco Rocha, that girl can model. I love it when a model really brings something to the table that you couldn't ask her to do yourself. I mean crazy faces or really passionate expressions, sure you can ask any model to give that but I can assure you that you won't get it with any real conviction. Even at her level Coco Rocha isn't afraid to make mistakes or look a fool but its those shots that will always stand out without fail.

Tell us about your most memorable photo shoot.

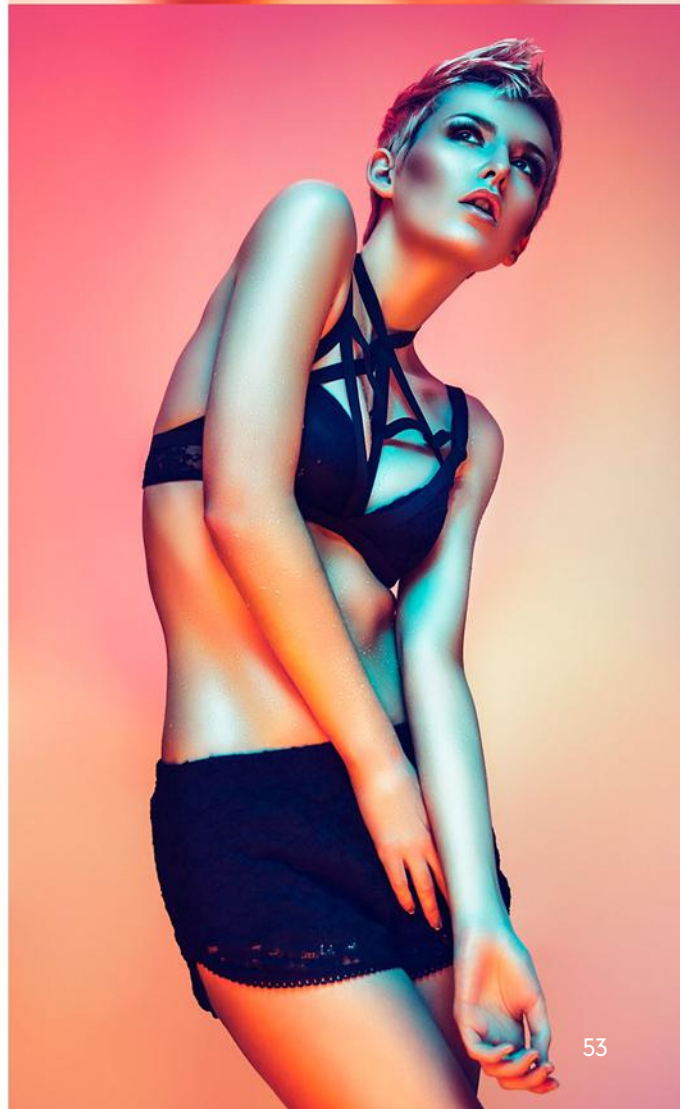

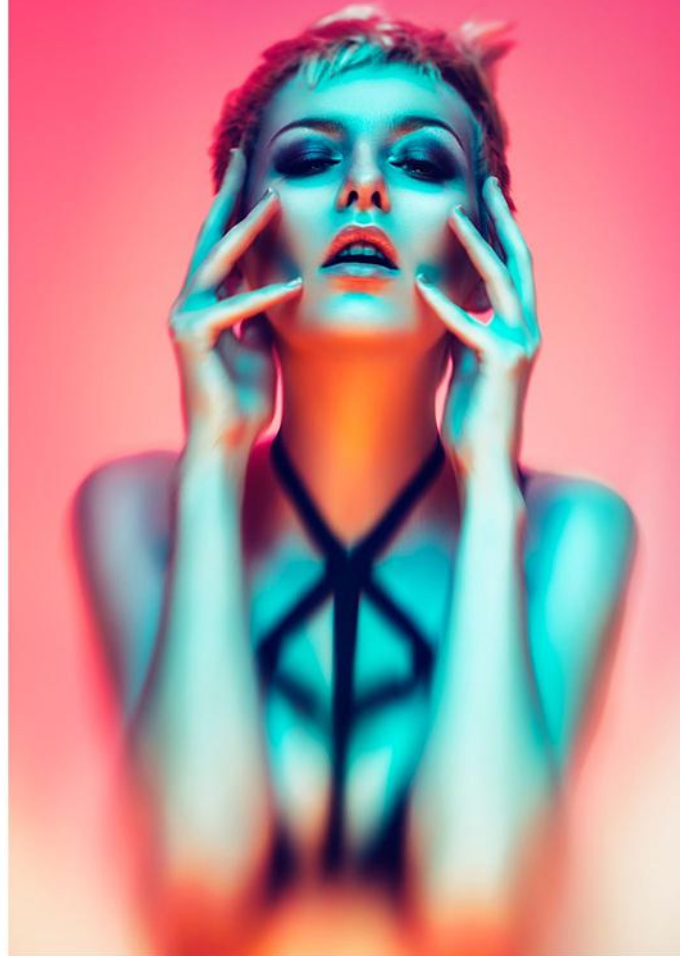

90% of my work is studio based so when I had the opportunity to shoot in an old English manor house with a photographer friend of mine I jumped at the chance. I was just really getting into coloured gelled lighting and it was more of a spur of the moment thing but I decided to do the whole shoot with coloured lighting when I arrived. This by the way is why I hate providing mood boards and all that fuss before a shoot. There are far too many variables at work on a good photo shoot and if you want to do anything even remotely interesting and creative then you always have to be open to new ideas that present themselves. That can't happen if you've mood-boarded yourself into a corner of prior expectations from the rest of the team, hence why my briefs are always extremely vague at best.

Besides your camera body, what piece of equipment that you own do you find indispensable?

It has to be my lighting kit, natural light bores me to tears so I like to have full control of my shoot to ensure its eye-catching and interesting for the viewer. The model looks stunning so the photograph should be to. As soon as I left Uni I picked up 4 Bowens 500w heads and I've picked up a couple more since then to augment the set in really big environments or complex lighting situations but I don't think I've taken a natural light shot outside my holiday snaps in a very long time indeed.

What photographers do you find inspirational?

Really its anybody who I feel is actually pushing the medium, trying new things and pushing themselves. I haven't followed any specific photographers for many years now and I find that I'm getting inspired by lighting in films and even in art and anime. Photographers work whose work I admire right now though are Khoa Bui, Jed Root, Greg Kadel and Bruno Dayan.

What qualities do you look for in a model?

For me they need to be confident, I love it when a model can bring some awesome facial expressions to the table and really look like they are pushing themselves with extreme poses that are eye-catching and provocative. I mentioned confidence before and sometimes this can be seen as cocky and arrogant but I'm cool with that, hey we're here to do a job and what great models do is very hard indeed. If they need to be borderline egomaniacal for us all to get outstanding images I'm down with that. It doesn't mean I'm going to want to spend any more time than absolutely necessary with them though haha.

What styles of photography do you find most personally rewarding?

I love shooting the editorial style, I say this over fashion as I see fashion as being very staged recently and probably more reserved for catalogues and look books. Unfortunately that's the work that pays but the editorial style allows for far greater creative freedom. There aren't too many clothing designers out there who want a catalogue of my crazy coloured lighting distracting from their pride and joy creations.

Tell us something funny that has happened during one of your shoots.

Unfortunately I work in studios so the stories end at models passing out and the stylists toy dog peeing on the light stand. That being said on the rare occasion that I do get let out usually something odd happens.

Many years ago we were shooting at an abandoned brick factory

(it looked more exciting than it sounds I promise). It was near the end of a long day and we were starting to wrap up when the 'supposed' owner turned up shaking fists and swearing at us asking us what we were doing there. I promptly turned around and reciprocated the gesture as we had gotten permission to shoot there. It wasn't until a very angry half hour later when we were driving home that the stylist thought I'd gotten permission and I thought the stylist had been the one who'd gotten permission so I'd actually been shouting in the face of the owner who had no idea at all about who we were, whoops.

What advice can you offer to novice or aspiring photographers?

In short, work hard and after you've worked really hard, work harder. I think if we all took a look at those people we really admire in the industry right now we would find strong evidence showing them to be outrageously dedicated. I could name a few right now that I know will go far purely based on the irrefutable fact that they will get better at something the more they do it and they're doing a lot of it a lot of the time.

If you do something a few hours a week you might be alright at it in 10 years time, do something 80 hours a week and you'll be great at it in 2 years. If you don't want to have a creative career then tell yourself that up front, be honest with yourself and about your goals, enjoy your hobby and you'll be far happier with your results and probably far more creative for it to. Those people who enjoy being creative and think it might be 'nice' to make it into a career are in for a miserable journey.

Aimee Gonzales

aka Megan Faccio

If you haven't already heard of the 2010 documentary Catfish which has led to the creation of the popular MTV reality series, we'll catch you up. Before a Facebook impostor changed her life, Aimee Gonzales was living a normal existence with her two young children, her electrician husband, and working as a model-photographer. She is now recognized as possibly the most famous victim of identity theft in popular history.

The documentary is about a young photographer, Nev, being filmed by his brother and friend, co-directors Ariel and Henry, as he builds a romantic relationship with a young woman via Facebook.

Nev lives with his brother Ariel in New York City when he is first contacted by Abby Pierce, an eight-year-old child artist in Ishpeming, Michigan, who sends Nev a painting of one of his photos. They become Facebook friends, which eventually broadens to include Abby's family: including her mother, Angela; and Abby's attractive older half-sister Megan Faccio, who lives in Gladstone, Michigan.

Ariel and Henry decide to film a documentary of Nev as he begins an online relationship with Megan. She sends him images and song covers that she says she recorded for him, but Nev soon discovers that the performances are all stolen from YouTube. He later finds evidence that Angela and Abby have lied about other details of Abby's art career. Ariel urges Nev to continue the relationship for the documentary, although Nev seems torn to continue. The siblings decide to travel to Michigan in order to make an unannounced visit to confront Megan about the discrepancies directly. As it turns out, Angela has made created the online persona Megan by using the stolen images of Aimee and invented the rest of the information she sent to Nev. Once they realize they've been had by this heavy-set 40 year old woman attempting to escape her mundane life by inventing this alternative online persona, Nev, Ariel and Henry realize the must find and contact the real girl they were led to believe was Megan, which leads them to Aimee.

Innocent Magazine recently sat down with Aimee to see how her life has changed and what she's up to now. Aimee was also gracious enough to pose for our cameras in conjunction with this interview.

So Aimee, how did you first learn that your identity had been stolen?

I got a phone call from Ariel who said that he was doing a documentary about his brother who was a photographer in New York, and that he really admired my work, and that he would love to have me in the documentary. He offered to fly me to New York and I said "well, I'll have to ask my husband" and then he said we would like to fly him out too! So of course I couldn't say no to that. I mean, a paid trip to New York? Sure! So when I got to New York, I still had no idea what was really going on. They met us at the airport and we hung out with them all night. They took us to a party, it was so strange. I didn't actually find out what was really going on until the next day when they interviewed me on camera and told me everything then. When I found out, my jaw just dropped.

What impact did appearing in the film have on you personally?

It really didn't. I mean people have definitely reached out to me from all over the world. I mean from everywhere. It's actually crazy for far it's actually gone. So that part is interesting. People ask me what happened and tell me their stories. But besides that I'm the same person. I don't think it's impacted my life that much.

Would you say that this unexpected notoriety has been a good thing for you or a bad thing?

Um.... Good. I've made some good friends. I really don't think it's been negative, because I haven't had to deal with Angela too much. She kind of scares me (laughs). She did send one apology letter through email, but I never responded to it. It didn't feel like it came from the heart. And what do you say when somebody does that to you? "It's okay."? I couldn't say that, because it wasn't okay.

Do people still recognize you or contact you as a result of the film?

Yes! Oh yes, I get that all the time still. Starbucks, quite often. A lot of people at Starbucks must watch Catfish (laughs). People are always like "Oh my gosh, you're that girl in that movie!" The craziest part is that the word "Catfish" is now in the lexicon, and somehow I'm part of that now.

Do you have any advice for others that may find themselves in a similar situation?

I think you have to make a choice. You can either live your life and block everything, and hide... or put yourself out there and deal with it. Let's face it when you put something on the web, it's there for the world to see. Just be careful what you put out there. If you don't want someone to have something, don't put it up. I mean I still have fifteen...or more...I just haven't checked lately....people saying they are Megan, or me.. and they use my picture! It's crazy.

What have you been up to lately?

I'm going to school now, and am taking a little break from my photography to earn my nursing degree. Photography will always be my life, but it's a little too much to do while going to school. Oh, and being a mom....doing the family thing.

As a photographer and model, what types of images do you like to create?

Fashion! I do a little bit of everything...weddings, maternity, bands, but fashion is my most favorite. I love fashion...so fun.

Who or what inspires you, as an artist?

Just seeing everybody's art that's out there. There are so many amazing artists. I could sit at my computer for days just looking at everyone's work thinking "Oh my gosh that's so pretty..." and then your mind just starts creating. At least it does for me.

On a scale of 1 to 10 how innocent are you?

(1 being not innocent at all and 10 being very innocent)

On a scale of 1-10 on the Innocent Scale... I would say I am definitely a 10 :)

What is your occupation?

Professional model, aspiring actress, writer and photographer

Where did you attend college?

I attend the University of Louisville. I will graduate with a Bachelors degree in Communications

Where did you grow up?

What's your best memory of having grown up there?

I was born and raised in Louisville, Kentucky and the most fond memories I have specific to my city are our traditions... the Derby, the Thunder, the Louisville Cardinals sports teams, UofL vs UofK rivalry but mostly the versatility of being able to choose whether you wanted to spend the day in the city (one of the largest in the country) or enjoying the peace and quiet of the country with only a 30 minute drive separating the two. Oh... and did I mention the bourbon?!

How would you like to be remembered?

I would like to be remembered for changing the way that modeling is viewed for petite women. However, I would more so like to be remembered for things that I have done for the community and humanity in general. Once I am able to afford it, I would love to travel and donate time and money helping people across the United States and around the world. I would also like to be remembered for my acting!

What are some of your interests or hobbies?

Walking, biking, hiking, boating, travel, photography, painting, cooking/eating, learning new things, crocheting, DANCING and enjoying time with friends and family.

What is your biggest regret in life?

My biggest regret in life is being afraid of modeling when I was younger because I was listening to everyone around me tell me that I would never make it because I am so short.

If you could spend a week anywhere in the world, where would it be?

If I could spend a week anywhere in the world... I would spend it on some amazing island like Tahiti or Bora Bora. Somewhere remote and secluded with beautiful waters and sands, with gorgeous tan people serving me drinks and food! OH... that would be the life!

What's the best job you've ever had?

SO FAR the best job that I have ever had is modeling. I love what I do. There is not one downside that I have found so far. I love to be in front of the camera. I love being dressed up and having people play with my hair and makeup. I love meeting new people and learning new things from them all. I love to travel. The list goes on and on. It has truly been a dream and I only hope to be able to continue and expand!

If you could have any job in the world what would it be?

If I could have any job in the world, I would be a movie star... A really, really, famous, awesome, big screen, award winning movie star! Trying to make that happen~

What are your top 5 favorite movies?

OOOH, movies is a tough one. I really love to watch movies, but I will go right off the top of my head- The Notebook, Spanglish, Spring Breaker (I have no idea why. hahaha), Black Hawk Down, and A Love Song for Bobby Long

Who is your favorite Disney princess?

My favorite Disney Princess would have to be Princess Merida from Brave, because she has her own ideals for herself and she sets her own path. But I also love Belle because she found true love- without thought to appearances- in what everyone else thought was the unlovable.

How did you get started with modeling?

I got started modeling when I networked with a local photographer who had worked with a few girls that I had gone to school with. I contacted him to see if he was interested in collaborating on a shoot, and he was. We set up a shoot shortly after, and I was HOOKED.

How long have you been a model?

I have been modeling for roughly two years. However, I became a 'professional' after becoming a Playboy Cybergirl and being published January, February and March.

Tell us about your favorite photo shoot:

My favorite photoshoot so far was one where we were in a hotel suite beside a building that was under construction. The WHOLE 4 hours that we were shooting... they were ALL standing at the windows on different levels watching and cheering. Eventually they even made a sign saying "Thank you! This has been the BEST DAY EVER" haha. So much fun!

What would you like to be known for?

I would like to be known for my success in modeling despite my small size... To prove to girls everywhere that if you want something, believe and work hard enough for something you can live your dreams and make changes in the world.

What other models do you look up to, stalk or are secretly in love with?

I look up to many of the big time models that are completely out of my league... But shoot for the stars... Right? To name a few, I would have to say Candice Swanepoel, Barbara Palvin, Rosie Huntington-Whiteley, Cara Delevingne, Kate Upton, Brooklyn Decker, Miranda Kerr, Nina Agdal... I could go ON AND ON

"I go out in public without a bra on ALL the time in the summer. I love not wearing a bra, it is freeing and cool, and you always get some crazy looks! haha"

Describe your ideal date...

Where would you go? What would you do?

My ideal date really has nothing to do with where we go or what we do... It is ALL about the connection. We could have no plans at all and just completely wing it.. ending up wherever we end up. As long as you are sweet and make me laugh... I'm ok with a cheeseburger and the lake!

What do you look for in an ideal boyfriend or partner?

What I look for in a partner is someone with a huge heart, accepting and trusting... Those are first. A sense of humor is also a must. I love tall men with muscles who has confident in himself, but is not cocky or conceited. I also am a sucker for tattoos, but they have to mean something and have a story to tell.

Do you kiss on a first date?

Yes. I will kiss on the first date if it has been earned ;)

Who is your celebrity crush?

ZAC EFRON, but I also love Justin Timberlake. I also love Jessica Biel enough to leave that one alone ;)

What do you wear when you want to get attention?

When I want to get attention, I wear little or nothing. If I am going out and looking for attention... I find the hottest LBD and heels I can.

What do you get complimented on the most?

Generally I get complimented on my butt... However lately it has been a good variety... From my butt all the way up to my long red hair.

What are your favorite features and body parts?

My favorite feature would either my clavicle bones or my red hair. My favorite body part is a tie between my toned tummy and butt.

What would you change about your body if you could?

If I could change anything... I would give myself another half foot in height. It would make my life a lot more simple. Otherwise, I am pretty happy with myself.

How long is your tongue?

I do have a pretty long tongue... Not quite KISS long though haha

What kind of personality do you have?

I have a very easy going personality. I am a people pleaser. I get along with everyone and love to laugh and have a good time with whomever is around. I love to be goofy and have fun, but I also love a good in depth conversation about... well anything really.

What surprises people about you, after they get to know you?

What surprises people most is how loud and silly I can be. I guess because I am small people expect me to be quiet/calm, but baby I am LOUD and PROUD. Also, how much I love to get naked... That is usually a surprise to people.

Are your boobs real?

My boobs are real and I have no plans on changing that. I think women who go fake are brave!

Do you ever go out in public without a bra?

I go out in public without a bra on ALL the time in the summer. I love not wearing a bra, it is freeing and cool, and you always get some crazy looks! haha

What is the craziest place you've had sex?

The craziest place I have had sex was in the middle of the lake in broad day light. All of our friends were swimming around us or dancing on the boat and we were just slowly and quietly getting it on while they were all unknowingly watching. Crazy erotic.

Do you like it rough or sensual?

I very much enjoy sensual sex.... unless I am drunk... then I like it crazy.

Have you ever had a 3-some?

I have not yet had a 3-some. Still looking for the right woman. My ideal would be 1 guy and another girl with me. Lots of hot steamy passion.

Does size matter? What is your personal preference?

Some people INSIST that size matters, but I have always been a firm believer of "motion of the ocean". You have to know how to work your penis and what your woman likes... otherwise it really doesn't matter how big you are. If you don't care... she isn't going to enjoy it. Maybe it is my small stature, but it seems like right around 7/8 inches is perfect for me. Not too big, not too small. Girth! Now that is important. I love a good fatty!

What are your favorite sexual positions?

My favorite sexual position is doggy style. I also love sideways, cowgirl, and reverse cowgirl. Just depends on the mood.

Do you have any favorite toys?

My favorite toy is my little bullet. It's small, but packs a lot of power and a surprise... Just like me :)

What is something that never fails to turn you on?

Girl on girl porn ALWAYS turns me on. Also kissing my neck or blowing softly in my ear gets me EVERY time.

Do you have any special talents?

Special talents... other than being awesome?! ;) hahah
I think I am a pretty talented cook, I can tie a cherry stem with my tongue and I can give CRAZY GOOD blow jobs... If I love you.

Do you like oral sex? Giving or Receiving?

I love oral sex... both giving and receiving. I think it is a must before penetration!

What is something you have always wanted to try?

I have always wanted to try sex with another woman.. one on one....

Do you watch porn? Favorite type?

I love watching good porn. I think it is fun and it gives you fun ideas to try with your partner. I like couples porn, but my favorite is girl on girl... and no need for the story telling... I fast forward through that part if I can.
