On a scale of 1 to 10 how innocent are you?

(1 being not innocent at all and 10 being very Innocent)

I might look like an innocent 7 but those who know me know I am minus 3 or something :D

What is your occupation?

I'm a model/actress

Where did you attend college?

I'm currently a student finishing up my degree in Anthropology here in Los Angeles

Where did you grow up?

What's your best memory of having grown up there?

I was born in Czech Republic and lived in my fairy tale hometown for 17 years. My hometown is called Vrchlabi, a small place where everyone knows everyone. That's the sort of closeness I miss here in the big city, even the gossiping part of it :D

What are some of your interests or hobbies?

I'm always interested in learning anything new, from my recent interest in taxidermy to MMA, or just learning about different religions and skin secrets. My daily life, if not full of shooting or filming, consists of staying fit, eating healthy, taking care of myself inside out, spending time with my man and riding my scooter or my bike :)

What is your biggest regret in life?

I try not to live with regrets; of course there are plenty of things I wouldn't do again if I could go back, like hurting certain people, or getting my tattoos, but I take all negative experiences as a lesson and I just learn as I go and try not to do the same mistakes in the future.

If you could spend a week anywhere in the world, where would it be?

I love the idea of having all my close family and friends in one city, like it all used to be in my hometown, I could just walk/ bike to certain people anytime I wanted, having everybody that's important to me in life close by is the nicest feeling ever. I really miss that. LA is a huge city and building that circle of close friends all over again after living in Czech Republic for 17 years isn't as glamorous as it might look.

Do you have any phobias?

Mine are more of pet peeves, like having no toilet paper when you're on the toilet or dirty feet in bed, shoes in the house, germs on escalators and public door handles, lol I've a whole list :D and I can't watch horror movies because I keep those scary images in my head and see them all again when it gets dark lol

What are your top 5 favorite movies?

Borat, Requiem For A Dream, As Good As It Gets, Pulp Fiction, Tim Burton's movies and whatever catches my eye; recently I really liked The Grand Budapest because it was conceptually so nicely done and Guardians Of The Galaxy just made me laugh a lot :)

Who is your favorite Disney princess?

Never been a princess type of girl. They lack an edge and bad ass kind of persona.

How did you get started with modeling?

I got offered to do a photo shoot after people saw some of my images on Myspace and then later on Model Mayhem. I set up a first shoot and started to build my portfolio from there because it was making me happy and filled me with passion for something to do after we moved to the US. I never thought about modeling back in Europe, I was a little emo kid with piercings and grey view of life, but with my background in dancing, acting and being on stage as a singer I really felt like I could have an outlet thru my photo shoots, at least a little bit, and let the little artistic Veronica come out :)

How long have you been a model?

I had my first photo shoot in 2009 right after high school, but I didn't make it my job until 2011 when I moved to Southern California from Sacramento to pursue it as a career.

Do you kiss on a first date?

I don't put myself in a box and go by 'steps', I go by how it feels and circumstances. My current boyfriend I did kiss on a first date but was hesitant to even go out with him for 2 years lol so it all depends.

What do you look for in an ideal boyfriend or partner?

Connection, energy, something that sparkles and keeps me excited. I can't get enough of what I currently have. He is fantastic in every way. Full of surprises, positivity, knowledge, passion, energy, ambition, kindness and love. I wouldn't change a thing. Attraction plays a major role in my relationships, if I'm not into a guy for whatever reason, I just can't fake it. And it's not about looks, the guy's personality can disgust me so much or his view on things that it can be a complete turn off for me even if he's supermodel material lol

Are your boobs real?

Yes they are real and I'm not shy to show them haha

Do you ever go out in public without a bra?

I don't like wearing bras but they do help prevent the aging process so I have to keep them in my life lol Sports bras and bikini tops are usually more comfortable than all those padded bras that might look great in pictures but once the shoot is done they're staying in the bag, not on me. I don't wear bras all the time and I can clearly see when guys notice it lol

What do you get complimented on the most?

From the visual point of view, people seem to like my eyes, smile and legs the most but mainly it's my personality, goofiness.

What surprises people about you, after they get to know you?

People that know me only from my modeling work often assume that I'm some cocky little mean b*tch but most of the things I shoot don't normally allow me to show off my true personality so that only comes in the videos and candid. People don't know my sense of humor and kindness until they meet me and I'm always happy to show them my true self, not to prove anything to anybody but to make them realize that you can't base your judgments on a book's cover, you gotta read thru and learn how not to assume things that are not true.

Getting into the Holiday Spirits!

Ah, the Holidays... The very thought of them warms the heart, no? Relatives coming to visit and staying too long; untangling lights and sorting out decorations; having to look at that worn out, poorly lit nativity scene that your neighbor puts out every year; and the shopping! Fighting the crowds at the mall while you stress out trying to guess what everyone on your list really likes.... It is absolutely no wonder that alcohol sales spike about 35% in December.

But truly I think, to most, it means gathering with loved ones, counting blessings and being thankful for good times past, present and yet to come. So for this issue I wanted to look at a shared cocktail, something great for groups. Egg nog is kind of the poster child for a holiday group drink but I didn't want to lead you all down the path of making homemade egg nog. While the results of said task are absolutely delicious (and there are plenty of great recipes on the net, if you dare), the actual endeavor is... well... messy. The cocktail dork in me will tell you though that egg nog is said most likely to have been spawned by the Milk Punch. This recipe was a mix of milk, sugar, sometimes egg and either cognac or brandy and it found its way across the pond with our early settlers back in the day. It then supposedly morphed a bit, as duties were high on those spirits while rum was cheaper and plentiful, into a rum based blend.

Now you can enjoy your nog with rum, bourbon or cognac (I've even had a Gin Nog) and you can still get a great Milk Punch at several great New Orleans restaurants. But let's follow the rum trail one more step. Often called tropical egg nog, the Coquito < Co-keet-oh > is said to have been created in Puerto Rico and expanded on the popular nog with the introduction of coconut. It's a holiday tradition wrapped in tropical dreams.... No, really, it's that good.

There are plenty of available recipes out there. Some even use egg yolks and are as messy as the aforementioned egg nog. However this simple version I use is tried and true and packs a kick like a reindeer's. Simple and made in batches, it's also perfect to pour some in decorative bottles and have on hand in the fridge for pop-in-guest gifts. (I usually have 2 with separate innocuous notes like "YOU are a great <neighbor/friend>!")

The Coquito

In a blender (check your blender cup size. You may need to make in batches and then combine at the end) combine:

- 1 can evaporated milk (you can use the 2% version, you'll never know the difference)
- 1 can condensed milk (there is a reduced fat version – same note as above)
- Quality cream of coconut. 1 can or bottle (I use Coco Real – perfect size and easy to use)
- 1 cup Ron Blanco (when forced to mix with a white rum, I like to use a spiced version. Or for this recipe a coconut rum would be ideal and would amp up the coconut flavor)
- 1 cup dark rum
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 teaspoon each ground nutmeg and cinnamon

And that's it! Blend on high until smooth and creamy. Bottle and let it sit in the fridge overnight. Those flavors come together and make something magical. Pour in a chilled rocks glass, over ice if you'd like, and garnish with a fresh dash of grated nutmeg. Sit in front of fire/ palm tree and enjoy.

Now I always like to give you my twist on a drink and that is the beauty of this concoction. You can change it up in so many ways and call it your own. Big Mango fan? Switch out ½ cup of mango rum for a half of the blanco. Big vanilla fan? Do the same switch but use a ½ cup of Baileys instead. Caffeine junkie? Coffee and coconut are an amazing pair! Incorporate some Kahlua in there. Have fun with it! That's what the Holidays and making cocktails is supposed to be.... Fun. My personal version is to use the recipe as above but add in 2 teaspoons of ginger paste. Trust me, it works! I always think of flavors that I know go together well in other applications and then apply them to a cocktail. In this case, coconut and ginger, think 'Thai food.' Or, for our valued readers in Thailand, think.... food.

Whatever you do, use the additional flavors as a side note – coconut needs to be the star on the top of this tree. And most of all, have a great and safe Holiday Season.

Enjoy!

On a scale of 1 to 10 how innocent are you?
(1 being not Innocent at all and 10 being very Innocent)

I'd say I'm roughly in between at a 5 or 6. I feel pretty innocent, but I know I have my naughty moments.

GIRL CRUSH ANYONE?

The evolution of 'lesbian chic'

Author - Kate Farhall

PhD Candidate in the School of Social & Political Sciences at University of Melbourne

Source - theconversation.com

At first blush, the increased visibility of sexual minorities in popular culture would appear to reflect a growing openness and acceptance of non-heterosexual forms of sexuality.

*Since the late 1990s, media portrayals of lesbian desire in particular have proliferated in works as diverse as Kissing Jessica Stein, Pretty Little Liars, Friends and The L-Word. This suggests a rising level of public comfort with women's same-sex sexuality.*

In recent years, the playful use of the term "girl crush" in pop culture to denote one woman's admiration or respect for another woman seems to point to a greater ease with homosexual relations.

It looks like a taboo has been lifted – but is that actually the case? Well, no. Greater visibility of women's same-sex desire on the surface resembles progress; peel back that surface layer and a considerable level of complexity emerges.

Read all about same-sex desire

By observing changes in the representation of women's same-sex sexuality in women's magazines over time, new parameters within which lesbian desire is socially sanctioned become apparent.

Women's magazines, such as Cleo and Cosmopolitan in Australia, represent a unique space for discussions of sexuality. Such magazines employ an intimate, yet authoritative tone with their readers.

They are replete with sexual messages and advice, and they are frequently identified as key sites of sexual socialization. Although magazine sales have certainly been affected by the rise of online media, in Australia both Cleo and Cosmopolitan have worked hard to integrate digital technology.

In a competitive, digital media landscape, women's magazines must provide content that is relevant and appealing to their target demographic: young women and girls. As such, these magazines are both barometers of popular culture and conduits through which mainstream ideas and values are disseminated.

The rise of 'lesbian chic'

In the 1990s, we saw a distinct shift in the way that Cleo and Cosmopolitan addressed women's same-sex sexuality. The educative or factual coverage of lesbianism and bisexuality that characterized the magazines in the 1970s and 1980s gave way to a more sensational coverage of "lesbian chic".

In an article from the October 1993 edition of Cleo, "lesbian chic", or the phenomenon of "Ostensibly Heterosexual" women (often celebrities) dabbling in lesbian desire is described as "the new sexual revolution". The magazine calls it the latest "fashion statement" – with "a gorgeous pouting gal-pal" labelled the hottest new "designer accessor[y]".

This is a far cry from references to lesbianism in the magazines from the previous two decades. Earlier references are steeped in the politics of social change and are often located in social commentary articles or advice columns.

In women's magazines from the early 2000s, the "lesbian chic" of the 1990s evolves into what feminist researchers have dubbed "heteroflexibility" – or the performance of lesbian eroticism to garner male attention.

Straightening up same-sex desire

An article from the November 2003 issue of Cleo entitled Girl-on-Girl Sexfessions offers "erotic real-life reads" and "graphic lesbian scenarios" alongside "girlie tricks to try at home with him!".

Lesbian sexuality in this configuration is presented as an erotic playground for heterosexual women – to titillate their male partners.

This eroticization of women's same-sex sexuality appears to have ebbed somewhat in contemporary editions of Cleo and Cosmopolitan from 2013, replaced instead by the frequent use of the term "girl crush".

This term is not restricted to the realm of women's magazines. It is strewn throughout popular culture. A glance at social media or fashion blogs confirms the term's currency, while its Urban Dictionary and Oxford Dictionary Online entries demonstrate its ubiquity.

In the contemporary editions of Cleo and Cosmopolitan, the phrase is used in a way which suggests all women can participate in the "girl crush". An interview with Zooey Deschanel in the July 2013 edition of Australian Cosmopolitan asks the actress to name the celebrity she has "a total girl crush on".

That the "girl crush" has become a routine question to be asked of celebrities demonstrates its pervasiveness and normalization.

Is the girl crush good news?
But what does this evolution in pop-culture understandings of lesbian desire mean?

The increased level of comfort with lesbian sexuality embodied in the casual use of the phrase "girl crush" in contemporary mainstream women's magazines might look like a sign that attitudes towards lesbians and gays have lightened up.

Yet it also arguably serves to trivialize lesbianism as a functioning form of sexuality and legitimate sexual identity.

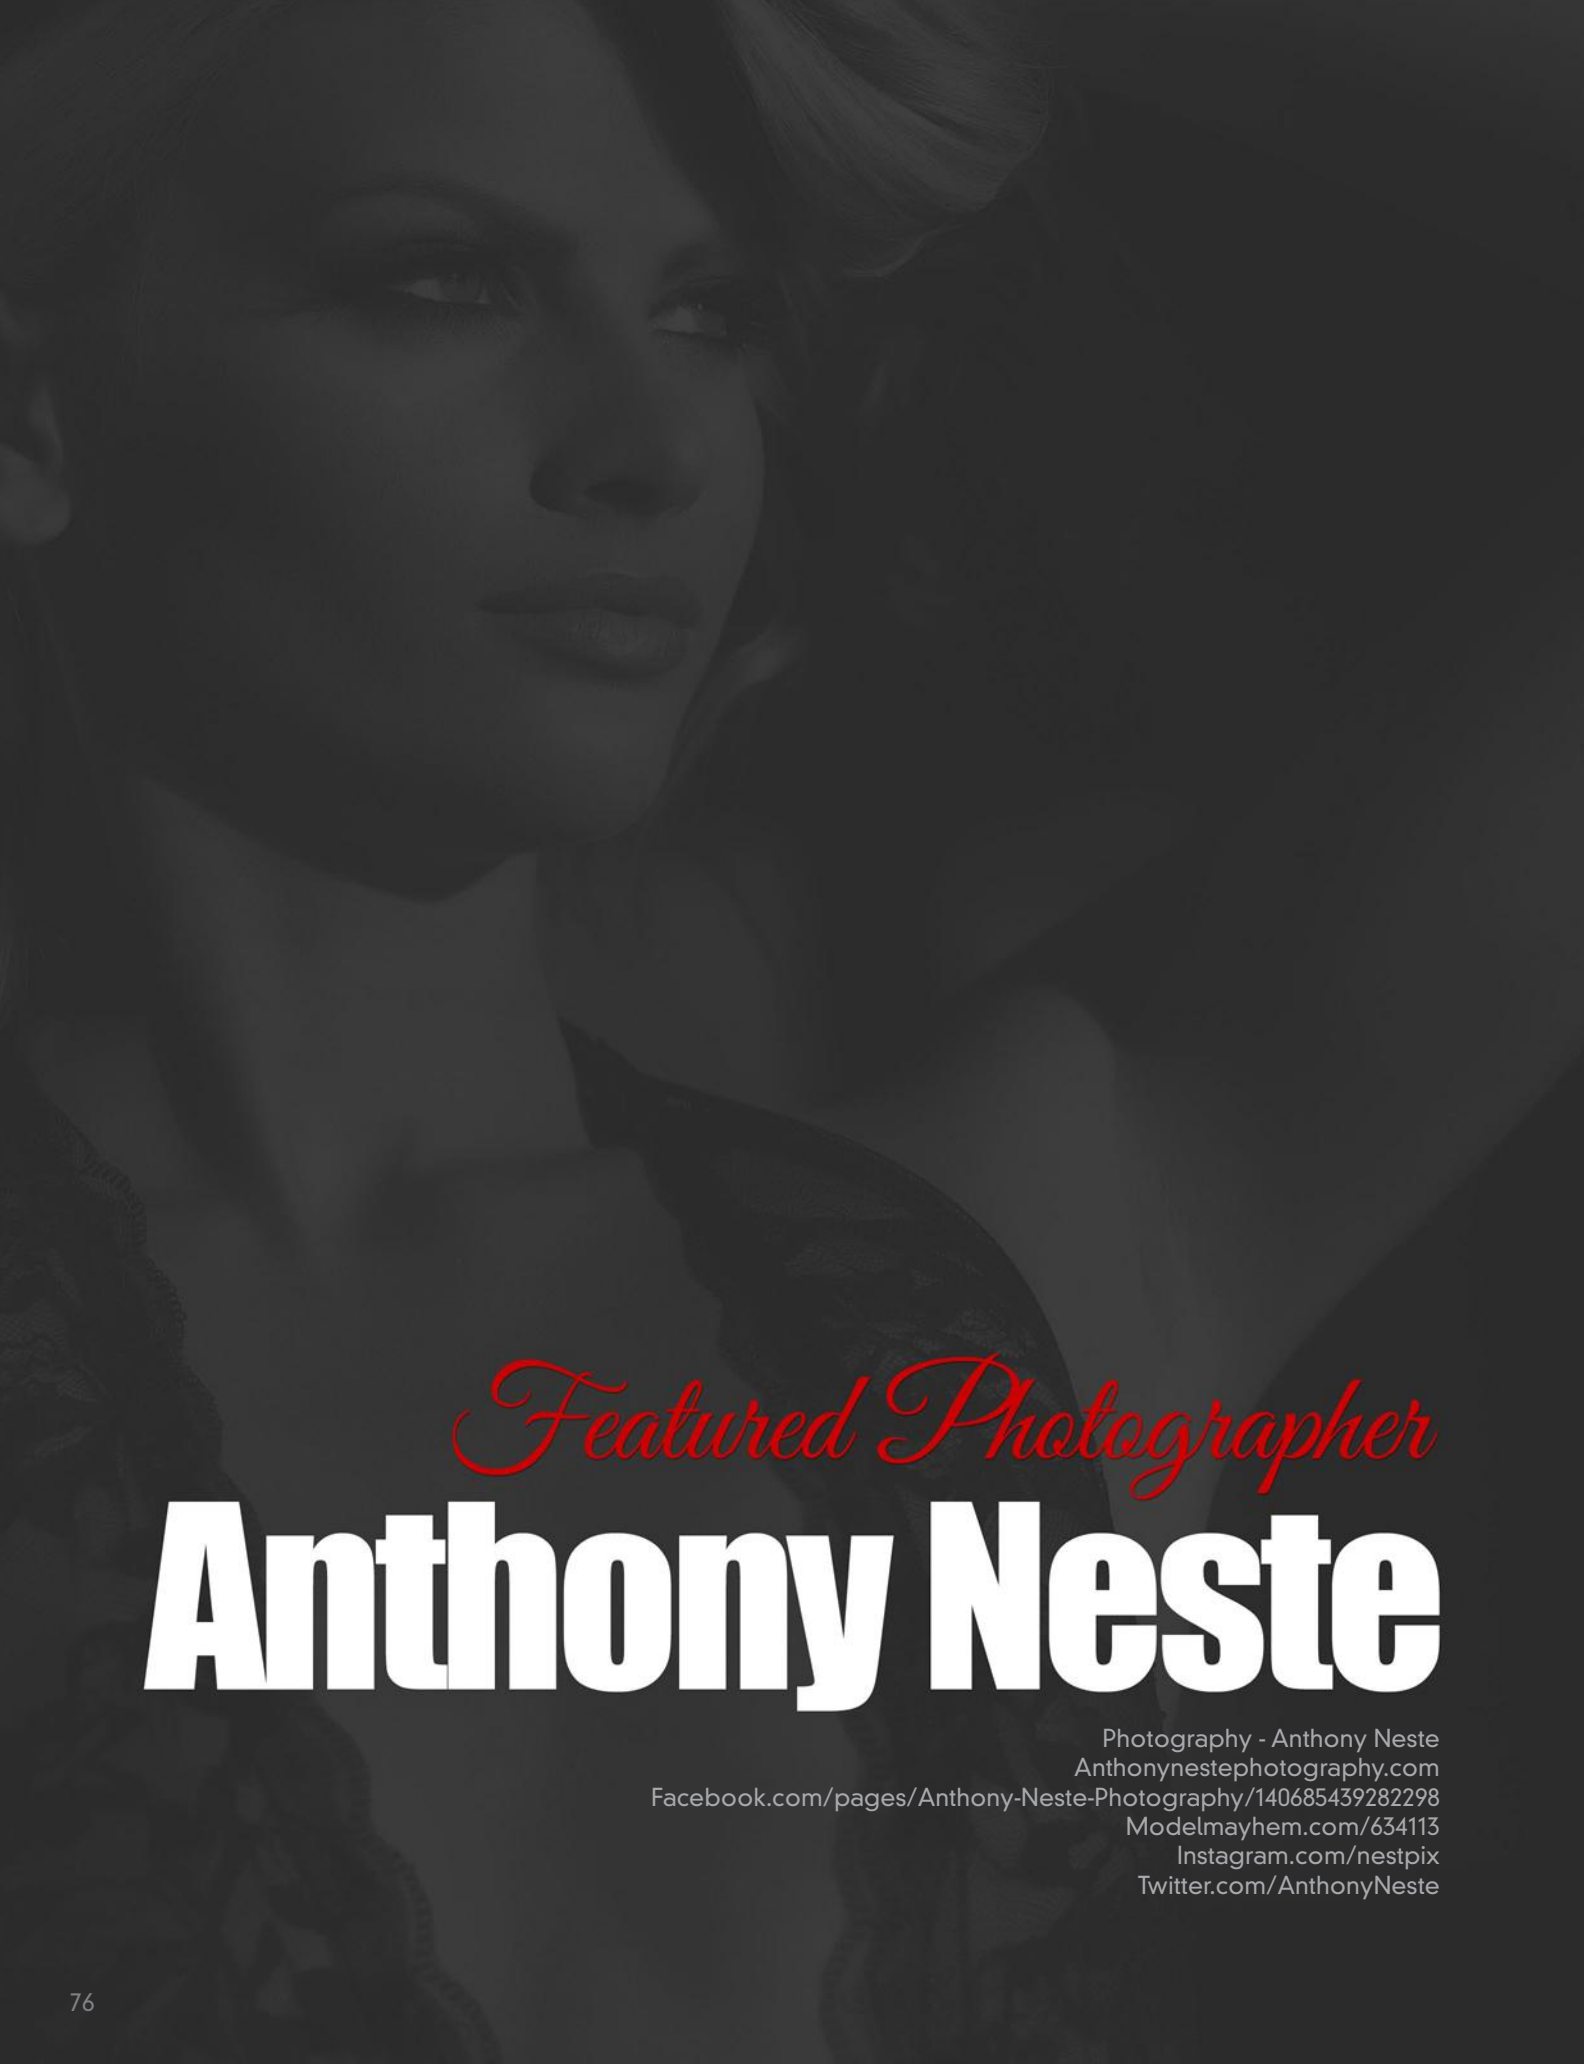

A "girl crush" presents a form of "lesbian-lite" that is stripped of its sexual or emotional meaning. It's as if all heterosexual women can participate in a "girl crush" without the stigma of genuine lesbian desire.

This perhaps underscores a lingering anxiety around women's same-sex sexuality. It can even work as a form of veiled homophobia analogous to the use of the phrase "no homo" among young men wishing to distance themselves from homosexuality.

The journey through "lesbian chic" and "heteroflexibility" to the "girl crush" serves increasingly to strip lesbianism and bisexuality of their sexual or emotional desire. Instead, same-sex attraction is reconfigured within heterosexuality.

This further marginalizes those women who may identify as part of a sexual minority group. Not only are they excluded from fully participating in the mainstream, heterosexual world, they are excluded from a socially sanctioned performance of same-sex desire.

Although those talking about "girl crushes" and heteroflexibility are doing so without malice, it's worth considering how language like this can actually be exclusionary. By identifying these trends as a form of false openness, we can begin to talk about more inclusive or progressive ways to represent sexual minorities within mainstream culture.

How long have you been a photographer? How long have you worked with models?

Over 30 years now. About 7 years doing fashion and swimwear.

What do you enjoy most about being a photographer?

The artistic side of photography. I love art, but can't draw a straight line, so a camera became my brush.

At what point did you realize that you wanted to pursue photography as more than a hobby?

When I started making $$$ at it!

What kind of personality do you have? How would your friends describe you?

Brash, fun, serious, honest, loving and artistic

What are some of your other interests or hobbies?

Fishing, Golf, Softball and watching films

What surprises people about you, after they get to know you?

That I'm really nice ;)

Tell us about your first muse. How did she inspire you?

Heidi Fahrenbach... well, she can do no wrong for me, in all the years we've been shooting, we never seem to be out of synch with each other. And she's amazing to look at. My second would have to be Kathleen Bass, she showed me how to bring art to the edge and draw it back just a little. She opened up some creative doors for me. I hope these two ladies stay a large part of my work forever.

If you could photograph any model (living or dead), who would it be? Why?

Elle Macpherson.... Because it's Elle Macpherson

Besides your camera body, what piece of equipment that you own do you find indispensable?

My 70-200mm 2.8 Nikon lens

What photographers do you find inspirational?

Herb Ritts, Helmut Newton, Steven Meisel, Patrick Demarchelier and someone I worked with at SI; Walter Looss

What qualities do you look for in a model?

Bone structure, being in proportion to her body size, and feeling free and comfortable in front of the camera. No hang ups on about anything, just own it on set.

What styles of photography do you find most personally rewarding?

Any styles that show good composition and a graphic design feel to it.

Tell us something funny that has happened during one of your shoots.

I opened my light case and a cat jumped out ...

What advice can you offer to novice or aspiring photographers?

Never stop the hustle...(to move hurriedly or unceremoniously in a specified direction)...to your goal. It just might happen.

On a scale of 1 to 10 how innocent are you?

Full time traveling promo/print model.

Where did you attend college?

Lakeland Community College

Probably pink...

As someone who did something great despite the odds, where I came from, etc. Someone who always had good intentions and others' best interests at heart.

What are some of your interests or hobbies?

I love theater, fashion, art, photography, music, movies, anything 60s era. Long naps, going out to dinner, dancing, bike riding, stuff like that. :)

What is your biggest regret in life?

No regrets, look forward not backwards!

If you could spend a week anywhere in the world, where would it be?

NYC. It's my favorite place and I've had the best times of my life there and would go any chance I got.

What's the best job you've ever had?

Modeling. My job I have now! That, or theater, I loved working in theater. I hope to start more up with that in 2015 for sure.

What's the worst job you've ever had?

Waitressing at Red Robin! THE WORST.

If you could have any job in the world what would it be?

Modeling or acting.

Do you have any phobias?

Germes for sure, well really, it's not so much germes, I just don't like feeling dirty or having food on my hands. Every time I eat, I have to wash my hands after, I try to avoid grease as much as possible, like if I eat pizza, I try to use a fork and knife...I'm so weird, right? Trust me, I try to refrain from doing it and I have gotten better than I used to be, but it's still bad! ha, Oh, and like touching public bathroom doors, not for me.

What are your top 5 favorite movies?

Factory Girl, St. Elmo's Fire, Breakfast at Tiffany's, Tiny Furniture, and American Hustle.

Who is your favorite Disney princess?

This is a tough question for me. I love the Little Mermaid, but then I love Belle, but I guess I should pick Jasmine because everyone calls me Princess Jasmine! haha.

Who is your favorite James Bond actor?

Pierce Brosnan

Where did you grow up?

What's your best memory of having grown up there?

I grew up in Cleveland, where I am still based out of as of now. Best memory? Hmm, I'm not sure if I could pick just one...this is tough. I have a lot of good memories. I played around a lot when I was younger. You know skipping school, always with friends, not really caring what anyone else thought (which where my best times) but, we all have to grow up, right? I guess...you could say...I was not so innocent, haha. One good memory I would say was when my friend Chelsey and I snuck into a private Jewish all-girls school at night time to swim in their pool. We seriously hopped a huge gate, it was right by a parking lot too, a cop at one point drove past and we just ducked down in the pool and he drove away. Obviously, we weren't hurting anyone, we just where bored and wanted adventure. I have a lot of stupid funny stories like that! None in which I currently partake in, bad girl gone good, perhaps? ;)

What was your most embarrassing moment?

Ha ha. I have had many. This takes us back to memories of growing up, which I was actually going to say as a best memory, but it's really not a good memory, just more of a frequently brought up story (even to this day) So, I was about 14 I would say, I was with a friend of mine from school, we were exploring the city....if you will...he had a bike, I was on foot. Before I go any further, it is crucial to this story that you know I was wearing a mini skirt and thong underwear, haha. Anyway, so he was on his bike and I was on foot, he had pegs on the front of his bike, so I decided to hop on the front of his bike to sit so we could travel faster, so I was basically blocking his view, sitting on the front of his handle bars with my feet on these pegs. It rained earlier that day so there where a lot of puddles and dirt everywhere. Long story short, I was supposed to be his look out since he could barely see and I did not notice a huge pot hole filed with rain water and dirt ahead, so we crash into this, I fly off the front of the bike smashing my face against the asphalt dirt and water and my body sliding across the ground, as this is all happening my skirt flies up, my friend can't stop his bike and he literally runs my bare ass over with his bike.... now since it was raining, I literally had tire tracks on my butt and my back. OMG it hurt so bad, I was sooo pissed off (apparently) I walked home and didn't go to school the next day because I seriously could not walk. I had huge bruises on my hips, stomach, chin, etc. I honestly do not remember being pissed off about this at the time, I just remember it hurt a lot, haha. But, my friend (Matt) swears to this day that I didn't talk to him for weeks after this happened. He always tells people this story whenever I see him, which now, is like once or twice a year, but he will bring it up and laugh how that's the first time he saw my ass. haha, embarrassing yet funny!

Tell us about your favorite photo shoot:

I don't really have a favorite, I have had so many great shoots, met so many amazing people, people who I am so thankful for. I love shooting, I love acting through my images, and I love being myself. All of this together with the amazing and talented people I work with on a regular basis makes any shoot the perfect shoot.

What other models do you look up to, stalk or are secretly in love with?

I'm in love with iconic models that are already dead. Marilyn Monroe (of course) Edie Sedgwick, Brigitte Bardot, women like them.

What would you like to be known for?

How long is your tongue?

Ha, I have no idea, want to find out?

What kind of personality do you have?

Goofy, caring, thoughtful, creative, kind of all over the place.

I wouldn't call it a 3 some, but a little girl on girl make-out session with a few girl friends at a party...you know for fun, on a dare, that kind of thing.

It's not the size, it's how you use it.

What are your favorite sexual positions?

On top

Do you have any special talents?

Many ;)

Do you like oral sex? Giving or Receiving?

Eh

What is something you have always wanted to try?

I would be up for it if I had a boyfriend that wanted to hook up with me and another hottie, if it was just for the night and they never had a serious relationship...

Do you watch porn? Favorite type?

I've actually never sat down and watched porn in my life, I mean I've seen clips from other people, or have seen some random stuff here and there, but never have really watched it myself.
