SEED

WAS PLANTED AS A CHILD!

Your family background:
Australian

How they help you in modeling career:

My mum was a dancer and professional ice skater so it was in my blood to want to something more than 9-5 work! My mum entered me in fashion shows as a child, so the seed was planted as a child!

Any special childhood prank or memory:

wow heaps, I have 2 brothers so lots of crazy pranks, from disturbing the neighbor hood, to hosing each other in the house, being locked in the wine cellar to them catching me inside a sleeping bag and dragging me down 2 flights of steps! Another time they tricked me into having a go on there home made flying fox, I jumped off the tree and my hair got caught in the pulley, so I ended up in hospital. We were always getting in some trouble, my poor parents!

Educational qualification:

I finished all my schooling. Completed a secretarial course at Tafe, and now I am half way thru Forensic medicine at University.

THE FIRST JOB

How you became a model, how did you experience the first job you did as a model?

At 15yrs I became a MIRROR BIRD, appearing on page 3 of the daily mirror, a Sydney paper, where the mirror girls were the most popular part of the whole newspaper! then when I hit 18 I was spotted in a night club by one of the big Sydney bikini designers BENZ Bikini's, he asked me to compete in the bikini comp that night, I told him I have nothing to wear, so he drove me to his shop on the beach at cronulla, and let me choose a bikini to wear in the competition, I went on stage and WON! I was hooked, I then did some cat walk for fashion designer Carla Zampatti. Then back to bikini comps and eventually photo shoots.

Why did you choose this line:

Well I love attention haha, and the spotlight, so it seemed to be the perfect choice for me. Plus everyone loves how tall I am

Your inspiration:

I adore Marissa Miller and Rosie Roff she is simply amazing and a gorgeous girl to chat to. And of course fellow Aussie Miranda Kerr, those girls are so natural and beautiful!

Projects you have worked in:

I have done FHM Mag, Face of Skin Revival, MyXYMag, and I am currently working for STUNNER OF THE DAY

Recent projects:

FHM Mag, Miss Lovely Legs, Skin Revival campaign, Auto-babes

Put these factors in order of importance for becoming a successful model:

The right looks is definitely the starter for success, you need to be saleable, then of course if you don't put the hard work in then all the looks in world wont help! Finally luck is a factor, there are so many girls out there, if luck is on your side, you will be discovered

MODEL AND PHOTOGRAPHER'S RELATIONSHIP

BY JAY S MANNE

This is a daring subject to touch in any measure. In being invited to write this piece, I am not discussing anything having to do with romance, I assure you. However, in writing this piece for ModelzView magazine I hope to enlighten and educate the readers outside the bright lights who admire the magnificent looking women portrayed in these pages.

I feel it my responsibility to dispel a few popular myths that are not only completely incorrect, but outright fallacious! The first false notion pumped into the public domain is that models are narcissistic, selfish, self-centered, mean, nasty, impatient, and caustic people. Having first experienced shooting fashion models 6 years ago, it became very apparent early on that exactly the opposite was true

The key to any successful shoot is shared motivation. The last thing anyone needs is a co-dependent relationship of two people with opposite interests forced together for competing interests on a set. Be it the model or photographer, the need for respect is absolute and paramount. The models I've had the privilege of shooting have been extremely gracious and very respectful. The few who aren't respectful will never be in front of my camera again. However, the young model who is new to the business is someone with whom the photographer needs to be most careful and understanding. This person is generally nervous in the first few months of shooting until they get acclimated and confident in their new career. And, isn't that true of any job? A good photographer can use that insecurity to his/her advantage if you take the time to assure the model that they are safe, that they look great and that the shoot will be a huge success. ! First and foremost, models ARE people, real people with ups and downs, with everyday stresses like everyone else. Issues arise now and then that may prevent that person from feeling their very, very best. The models I've known have almost universally know how to keep their personal lives separate from their model lives. As a group, models in general tend to be more open, expressive, considerate, polite, caring and patient than the population in general. Whether on the set, or in the field, you will most likely experience a feeling that the model is happy to cooperate with the photographer, knows what she/he wants, and knows what the photographer and client wants in a shot. The clear purpose and goal for both parties is shared; to get the BEST photo that will make the photographer and the model look exceptional. Everyone benefits so long as this is true. The people I know in this business who are the most successful are the most even-tempered people imaginable!

Of course, I have my favorite models, just as my models have their favorite photographers. All I want from any model is that they show up on time, ready to work, concentrate on the job at hand, and be affable about it. I don't ever have to ask any model I work with to leave whatever problems, if any, at the door of the studio. It is understood! And the same thing applies to me. The LAST thing I, nor any other photographer needs is a grouchy, mean, scowling, rude person in front of my camera. I don't care how that model looks aesthetically, nor what their reputation may be, if they don't want to be in front of my camera, then I don't want them wasting my time. I do not know one other photographer who feels the any differently.

Further, I don't have to mention by name as to who are my favorite models. The ones who know me already know who they are because I've told them how much I appreciated and enjoyed working with them and vice versa (and, it's a fair assumption that some of those favorites are in ModelzView on a regular basis). I consider myself most fortunate to be a photographer of extraordinarily attractive women. I simply try to project that gratitude to those with whom I work, regardless of the job. Being a grouch NEVER works and is ALWAYS counterproductive. Smiles work wonders. Cooperation works wonders. And, clarity of purpose in setting clear goals work wonders in making a successful model/photographer collaboration and producing quality photos.
